

Among the 12 queen contestants for the annual Gold Rush Jubilee are Miss Barbara Gysin (left), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar J. Gysin, Medford, and Miss Letha Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow W. Davis, Jacksonville. The winner will be selected July 29. Miss Gysin, a junior at Phoenix High school, is interested in home-making hobbies, such as sewing, and reads a great deal. Miss Gysin, who is 16 years old, is already planning to become a nurse. She is sponsored by Norton Lumber company, Phoenix. Crater Lions of Medford are sponsoring Miss Davis, a sophomore at Jacksonville High school, where she is active in all sports. Miss Davis has chosen the field of science for advanced study. The queen contestants are competing for more than $600 worth of prizes. Grand prize is a $300 wardrobe of the winners choice. The Jacksonville Community hall will be the scene of a banquet Thursday, July 30, at 7:30 p.m., at which the queen and her court will be honored. The winner will reign over the ninth annual Gold Rush Jubilee to be held in Jacksonville August 1 and 2.

U.S. Restaurants Best Declares Roving Reporter

By ROBERT MUSEL
United Press International
New York (UPI)—As a man who has eaten chicken pili-pili in the Belgian Congo, fish and chips in London, shashlik a la Russe in Moscow and breast of guinea hen under glass in Paris, may I make a gastronomic statement?
The best all-around restaurant food in the world is in the United States—especially New York.

Every now and then, this fact has to be hauled out from our national inferiority complex on matters of taste and culture. For a people who are rightly proud of ourselves in many ways, we insist year after year in accepting humbly the fiction that only Europeans are great restaurateurs.

I have just toiled my way through some better restaurants in New York for a refresher course in American eating before resuming my roving assignment in Europe and Africa.

The French food I ate was not far off the best food in France.

The Italian food was at least as good as that fed me in Rome.

I had Japanese food that reminded me of the highly-praised restaurant I was taken to in Tokyo.

Jewish Food Good
Tel Aviv isn't in the picture with New York when it comes to Jewish food. And, for that matter, Arab cuisine is better here than in the Mideast, with the exception of a few dishes.

Before the Francophiles and the Germanophiles begin screaming, I'll admit you might find the best French restaurant in the world in France or the best German eatery in Germany. But the New York equivalent will be right in the same league.

And neither Paris nor Berlin (nor any other foreign city) can score as high in every worthwhile national cuisine as can this metropolis.

Outside of our ridiculous habit of switching the fork from hand to hand while cutting and eating food (keep it in the left hand all the time, folks) we are the most consistent and adventurous eaters-out in the universe.

Hence there is a premium on serving the best. I have seen more provocative ideas in food in the past fortnight (like chicken baked inside a pineapple) than I am likely to run into in years of foreign chomping.

Daringly Different
Four of us had dinner one night in a comparatively new restaurant, The Forum of the Twelve Caesars, where about one-third the fabulous menu consisted of new variations on the classic French-Italian cuisine. None of us could think offhand of any great European restaurant where the food would have been so daringly different—and so delicious.

I wish our severest critics, the British, would try New York's better eateries. I keep reading in London newspapers about our "tasteless" food. Maybe these dispatches are designed to make the average British restaurant-goer feel happier about his razor-thin roast beef, soggy potato chips and browned vegetables.

But it isn't true. And we ought to say so—more often and louder.

Oregon May Get GP Chemical Plant

Portland (UPI)—A pilot plant to produce chemicals from bark and wood waste is planned by Georgia Pacific Corporation.

James L. Buckley, vice-president for research and development, said the plant probably would be built in Oregon. He said it would "develop an important family of chemicals from bark and wood waste that previously had no use at all."

Board Chairman O. R. Cheatham, a Portland visitor this week, added that the firm is considering expansion into Alaska. He said it had a concession near Juneau which lasted until July of 1961.

Klamath Rodeo This Week End

Klamath Falls (UPI)—An all-star lineup will participate in the 25th annual Klamath Basin Roundup Association rodeo this week end at the Klamath fairground for total purses of $3,300.

Association president Hang Ring said the western event is the first in a series of three held in Klamath Falls, Eugene and Prineville on successive week ends. Action is scheduled for 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday nights and the championships will be determined Sunday at 2 p.m.

Townsend Continues As Head of Group

Portland (UPI)—The 19th annual convention of the Townsend Clubs of America closed here Thursday.

Delegates voted to continue Dr. Francis E. Townsend, 93-year-old founder of the pension plan bearing his name, as head of the organization. The convention also voted to oppose any further increases in pay or pensions for members of Congress until all elderly persons are provided with pensions.

Carrots, beets, rutabagas, turnips, parsnips and potatoes need cool, moist storage conditions. They should be kept at temperatures between 32 and 40 degrees Fahrenheit, according to experts on the subject.

Among girls who marry between the ages of 15 and 19 in the U. S., the divorce rate is 12.6 per 1,000, compared with a rate of 4.8 per 1,000 for those wed between 21 and 25.

Legend has it that Penn Yan, N. Y., was so named as a compromise between those early settlers who came there from Pennsylvania and the Yankee pioneers from New England.

According to the American Dietetic Association, the Roman emperor Nero ate leeks to clear his voice and the Greeks used to "purify" their criminals by making them chomp on garlic.

Las Cruces, N. M.—(UPI)—Poker player Joe Mario lost $40 in an illegal game, then decided to get even and reported it to police. A city judge heard his story, fined him $50 for gambling.

The Rhesus monkey, so widely used in medical and outer-space research, has given the first two letters of its name to what is so widely known as the RH factor in blood.

Almost 40 per cent of the area of the continental United States receives too little rain for general agricultural purposes, according to a survey by the Twentieth Century Fund.
