

Research Told For Douglas Fir Forests

McMinnville - Linfield Research Institute on the Linfield college campus here has received a two-year grant of $15,200 from the National Science Foundation to support research concerning "biotic succession in a Douglas fir forest."

Whether Saddleback mountain possesses the conditions for the regeneration of a coniferous forest, and whether again in the future a harvest of trees will be possible there, are questions which ecological studies such as this one being undertaken by LRI can answer.

Hearing Tuesday on Air Route to Calgary

Civic witnesses from at least 16 Washington, Oregon and Idaho communities will appear at a Civil Aeronautics Board hearing in Spokane tomorrow in support of West Coast Airlines' application to serve Calgary on a new international route from Spokane, the Seattle-based regional carrier announced today.

The new route is one of a number of international air links worked out recently in Ottawa in an agreement between the United States and Canada. Both West Coast and Northwest Airlines have applied for the route, which also may be served by one or more Canadian airlines.

Calgary, only 286 air miles away by highway. The present air connections now required 7 hours and 20 minutes, including layover, by way of Great Falls, Mont.

The civic group representative from other communities will also appear in support of the need for such service, but will name no individual carrier, it was reported.

Rare Wax Gives Shine To Shoes

New York (UPI)—One of the world's most expensive and rarest waxes—and one of the most difficult to obtain—is largely responsible for the shine in your shoeshine.

It's called carnauba wax; it comes from a tree called the carnauba palm; and it's found only one place in the world: Brazil.

According to researchers at the Esquire Boot Polish Laboratories, the palms must be at least 10 years old before any wax can be obtained from them and only 20 leaves are cut from each tree annually.

Ships' Graveyard Being Cleaned Out

Oakland, Calif. (UPI)—A graveyard of sunken ships here is being cleared out to make way for an ultra-modern recreational boating center.

Dredges cleaning up the harbor have scooped up a variety of moss-covered hulks that had been towed into the protected cove of the Alameda Estuary off San Francisco Bay.

Although none of the ships was identified, they were believed to be of the windmill-type that brought 49ers around the Horn to the California gold fields.

The altitude record for a manned balloon was set on Nov. 8, 1956, by Navy Lt. Cmdr. Malcolm D. Ross and M. Lee Lewis when they rode to 76,000 feet in a pressurized aluminum gondola.

The Army did not officially adopt the United States flag until half a century after the American Revolution.
