

TRAPPED BY SIDEWALK ELEVATOR—Mario Grande, 19, winces and screams in pain while firemen attempt to free his leg, caught in a sidewalk elevator on a downtown San Francisco street. The boy's leg was pinned between elevator and shaft for more than an hour, and it was feared he would lose it; latest hospital report is that it may be saved.

The Most Natural, And Most Mysterious Food Is Honey
There is hardly a thing on the market today that is a natural food; that is, a food that has had nothing added to make it brighter, to keep it fresher, or to insure its keeping qualities. Some sort of chemical is added to nearly everything today, somewhere along the line between producer and consumer, as a tenderizer, preservative, an additive or a flavor.

By chemical means we have tried to improve on Nature. In some instances we have, but the most mysterious food in the world has been untampered with. It still retains its unique status of being as nearly perfect as a food can be and be natural. Peculiar that we can still purchase a food today that is identical with that which their ancient Egyptian enjoyed 4,000 years ago. Stranger still, the fact that some of this food, stored in stone jars by those ancient people, is still pure and good today after 4,000 long years. It's true.

Millions of generations of honey-bees have worn their frail wings to tatters since that long ago time, carrying nectar to countless hives to produce honey. Honey, a product of thousands of tiny, dedicated lives, willingly sacrificed because their owners worked themselves to death for the furtherance of their kind. Honey, the perfect food, created by an affinity between an insect and a blossoming plant and the chemistry of digestion.

Today's chemists can analyze honey; separate it into various parts. They found what they suspected all the time; that there is a complex organic compound contained in honey that defies artificial duplication. A great proportion of honey is water and fruit sugar, already digested by the bees and therefore easily assimilated by our own bodies.

Canyon Survivor To Head for Home
Grand Canyon, Ariz.—(UPI)—A 15-year-old boy who survived seven days in scorching heat and wilds of Grand Canyon might return to his Georgia home today with his father for some southern fried chicken.

John Manson Owens III lived on cactus pulp and mesquite beans during the ordeal in which his two companions perished. He was found Friday and his father flew from their Savannah home to be with him.
