The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

TREATMENT FOR DIABETES

A new oral drug, now called DBI, and useful in the treatment of diabetes was recently reported by Drs. Louis Freedman, Georges Ungar, Seymour L. Shapiro and Harvey Sadov of New York.

At the recent meeting of the American Medical association, in Atlantic City, the authors reported that with the new drug, most of the 1,708 patients treated for from three to 15 months did well. Even many young patients did well. No serious signs of toxicity were observed, but there were some side effects such as digestive upsets. Ten per cent of the patients treated failed to respond to the treatment.

The chemical name of the drug is phenformin, and it belongs to the group of biguanides. It's mode of action is still unknown. It works in some cases in which the previously discovered drugs have not worked. In seven out of 10 adult patients it took the place of insulin.

Sexual Abnormalities
As I must keep pointing out in this column, people must not look on the sexual deviate with disgust or disapproval or a desire to punish. Some day our cruel and antiquated laws must be changed so that these people can be treated as sick or malformed persons, and not as criminals.

An important paper on this subject was just published in the London Lancet by Dr. K. L. Moore. He reported studies of cells taken from the lining of the mouth of infants just born. During a year, cells from 3,715 babies born in a hospital in Winnipeg were examined under a microscope. In all but five of these babies the sex was determined by the microscopic test was the same as that suggested by the appearance of the child's external genitalia. The five exceptions were all in infants who looked like boys but who had body cells typical of female babies. Apparently, they were girl babies who, because of some abnormality of development in the womb, had acquired a male type of external genitalia. Something, perhaps, went wrong with the internal secretions.

The point I want to keep hammering home is that when, perhaps 14 years from now, these infants who have been brought up as boys, keep maintaining that they have always been girls, with a girl's set of emotions, plus a tendency to get a crush on a boy, and later a desire for a home and children, we-all of us—must be ready to admit that a mistake was made, and that it should be rectified as soon as possible. Why can't we feel sympathy for these unfortunate boys and girls, so cruelly gypped by an accident of nature? Why do we persist in refusing them their right to be operated on? Why, when they are operated on, do we refuse to change their birth certificate?

On my desk right now are very sad letters from three fine people who know that surely a horrible mistake was made when they were born. The doctor said they were boys, but these people have always known that they were feminine. As one says, "He" is never so happy as when cooking, or sewing, or cleaning house for his sister. These people want terribly to have the mistake rectified, but in East Hartford, Conn.—UPI—Clifford R. Brewer, a 25-year veteran at Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Corp., goes home when he goes to work. The tobacco farm where he lived as a boy had been turned into a huge parking lot at the aircraft factory.

State Rests Case In Corvallis Trial
Corvallis —UPI— The state Tuesday rested its case against Wesley Bodi, 20-year-old Monroe, Ore., carpenter, charged with involuntary manslaughter in the death last month of a 4-month-old girl. Judge Fred McHenry denied two motions by the defense to dismiss the case. Defense Attorney Arthur Higgs said he would attempt to show that a confession by Bodi was obtained by persuasion and kindness, rather than through duress and intimidation. Higgs charged Bodi was promised freedom if guilty was admitted. Bodi is charged in the death of little Peggy Susan Smith, daughter of Mrs. Clara Smith. The child died one day after being struck by Bodi.
