

Portland Arrival Of Mrs. Gatewood Expected Friday

Portland—UPI—Emma Gatewood, 71-year-old walking grandma from Gallipolis, Ohio, is scheduled to end her 2,000-mile hike from Missouri to Portland Friday morning with a triumphant ride into the city in a white convertible. Mayor Terry Schunk and Centennial officials will accompany her.

Oregon Centennial Commission chairman Anthony Brandenthaler said Mrs. Gatewood would have a free suite at the Benson hotel plus food. A motorcycle escort will guide the convertible into the city and among gifts from the Centennial will be treatment for her weary feet, new shoes, a full wardrobe, the use of a car and fresh flowers every morning.

Grandmothers Day
Brandenthaler has declared Friday "Grandmother's Day" at the Exposition and all grandmothers over 65 will be admitted free.

Mrs. Gatewood arrived at the Multnomah county line Wednesday and was greeted by Sheriff Francis Lambert, who made her an honorary deputy sheriff. Deputy Sheriff Bill Glandening offered to carry her umbrella but she pulled back. "Not on your life," she said. "I need it to defend myself against those commoners with cameras."

She had previously expressed irritation with curiosity seekers and photographers and Tuesday rapped Hood River photographer Bob Hall over the head with the umbrella. Later she expressed remorse and apologized, saying she was just tired of people bothering her.

The spry grandma, who has been taking hikes for years, spent Wednesday night at Dodson, just east of Multnomah Falls along the Columbia river.

Her walk to Oregon is no publicity junket, she said. "I've been thinking for a long time that I'd like to walk the Oregon Trail."

Mrs. Gatewood works in the winters as a practical nurse. During the summers, she rents her home and goes hiking.

Teamsters Union Being Probed

Washington—UPI—Asst. Atty. Gen. Malcolm R. Wilkey said today the Justice Department is investigating "wholesale" racketeering, perjury and income tax evasion by members of the Teamsters Union.

Many of the inquiries grew out of disclosures in the 30-month-old Senate Rackets committee investigation. The department turned up the other cases on its own.

Disclosure of the Justice Department action came on the heels of two stinging racketeering committee reports linking Teamsters President James R. Hoffa with crime, corruption and communism. A grand jury has been reviewing Hoffa's testimony before the racketeering inquiry for eight months for possible perjury action.

Wilkey, head of the Justice Department criminal division, said certain Teamsters' activities were of "more than academic interest." He rejected any thought that the department was "going after" the Teamsters.

He said "wholesale violations" by certain unidentified Teamsters officials "have been called to our attention."

The department's scorecard shows 39 convictions of 31 Teamsters since 1954. These included perjury, income tax evasion, extortion of kickbacks from employers, and Taft-Hartley Act violations.

In addition, the government has pending 11 indictments against 4 Teamsters for these same crimes plus anti-trust violations.

Japan Cooperative In Salmon Fishing

Washington—UPI—The Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee was told Tuesday that Japan is being more cooperative in handling salmon fishing along the east-west dividing line in the western Pacific.

Donald L. McKernon, director of the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries, said more red salmon have been permitted to escape into Bristol Bay in Alaska this year and added that he was "pleased with the cooperation of Japanese salmon fishermen."

McKernon also reported that new sources of shrimp had been found along the Alaskan coast and off the California coast.
