

Vibration Sickness Points To Need for Industrial Medicine

Washington (Science Service)—The pneumatic drill may be literally knocking the stuffings out of the big-muscled worker hanging on to its handle.

Reduced sharpness of hearing and vision, blood vessel spasms, and damage to bones and joints are but some of the symptoms of vibration sickness.

Scientists know relatively little about this occupational disease, Dr. R. Lomax Wells, an expert in industrial medicine here, told Science Service. However, vibration sickness is becoming increasingly important with the expansion in road-building and construction. Very little work has been done on the effects of long-term vibration on the human body.

Russians Concerned

The Russians are also concerned with the problem, according to the current issue of Scientific Information Report, distributed here by the Department of Commerce's Office of Technical Services.

Several researchers report, in a journal translated by the Central Intelligence Agency, on the symptoms, causes and treatment of sickness caused by both high and low vibration. Several recommendations are made by the Russian scientists to improve conditions for the worker:

1. Redesign pneumatic

drills to suit various types of work. (One researcher suggested a drill that uses a new cycle to reduce recoil.)

2. Standardize industrial vibrations, defining in the permissible limits in order to take preventive measures.

3. Make periodic x-ray examinations of the workers' bone tissue and joints.

4. Use devices such as heat-insulating handles on drills and special footwear that absorb vibration.

One Russian researcher, A. M. Mel'kumova of Moscow, reported that vibration in factories where reinforced concrete items were manufactured affects the nervous system primarily. The morbid condition, she said, is localized in the cerebrum and spinal cord.

Health Insurance Coverage Mounts

New York (Science Service)—Twice as many Americans have become covered by health insurance since 1948, figures released here show.

Likewise, the amount of benefits paid also increased five times the amount paid through health insurance since 1948.

More than 61,000,000 Americans were covered by health insurance in 1948. Within 10 years, 123,000,000 persons were protected against the costs of medical and hospital care, the Health Insurance Institute reports.

Benefits paid out in 1948 totaled $772,000,000. By 1958 that figure had risen 50 per cent to $4.7 billion.

The extent to which the health care costs of the nation are being increasingly met through health insurance is shown by the fact that from 1952 to 1957 the nation's medical bill climbed by more than 50 per cent, and health insurance benefits designed specifically for hospital and medical services increased 118 per cent, the Institute said.

In 1948, benefits from health insurance paid 27 per cent of the total costs of hospital services and six per cent of the total costs of physicians' services in the U. S. In 1958, however, health insurance paid 60 per cent of these hospital care costs and more than 30 per cent of the physicians' costs, Institute figures reveal.

About 90 per cent of all airplane accidents are caused by human errors, according to aeronautical studies.

About 14,000 school buses are put into service in the U. S. in a year.
