Disappearance of Couple on Desert Continues To Be Mystery

Los Angeles – (UPI) – The final chapter may soon be written in the mysterious case of Klaus Martens and a pretty nurse named Marajune Walker who vanished together on Arizona's sun-seared desert more than eight years ago.

His former father-in-law is taking legal action to have Martens – who was 28 years old at the time of his disappearance – declared legally dead.

Martens, a German-born salesman, and Miss Walker, then 22 and a native of Malverne, N.Y., left Pasadena, Calif., July 15, 1951, on a Sunday morning flight in a rented plane for Blythe, Calif.

Aircraft Found

Their small aircraft, some gasoline still in its tank and its engine in working order, was found 16 days later in the desert 50 miles from Yuma, Ariz.

The couple was never seen again. No trace was ever found of their bodies.

"A case like this one is never really closed under these circumstances," said Yuma County Sheriff T. H. (Pete) Newman. "For one thing, there were too many unexplained things. And for another thing, we just had what might have been a new development recently.

"Some bones and a skull were found in the general area where they disappeared. But it turned out they had been on the desert too long—more than the eight years these people have been missing – to be them."

Newman is bothered by many unexplained aspects of the case, especially why the two young people landed, and then abandoned, a still functioning plane.

Newman said it was 10 minutes flying time to safety at the small Arizona town of Welton just 30 miles away from where the plane was found. And he said tracks from the plane indicated the couple walked across a plainly marked but little used road leading to Welton.

"If they could have made it to Welton, they would have been safe," Newman said. "But they didn't turn north on the road."

A brief note found on the plane said the couple had walked west. It had their names and was timed "2010 hours Sunday." A postscript to the note also in Martens' handwriting but much more firmly written, added "5:45 A.M. Monday." There was no explanation in the note of the desert landing.

No Hope for Life

Newman has no hope the couple ever will be found alive.

"They couldn't stay there long without water, and there isn't any there," he said. "If they tried to walk out 35-40 miles, they might not have made it.

"Nobody knows why they landed. Nobody knows a lot of things about this case. It's all a guess. He probably had enough gas to fly to safety, but the location is in a valley, and if he wasn't up high enough, he couldn't have seen over the mountains to Welton. But that still doesn't explain why he landed."

Attorney Roscoe R. Hess is the man interested in having Mr. Martens declared legally dead. Hess' daughter had been married to, and divorced from, the young salesman. The lawyer is handling the missing man's small estate, which he said amounted to $500. An insurance policy on Martens' life for $3,000 has been paid to his mother, Mrs. Ferdinand Martens, who now lives in Frankfurt, Germany.

What Is The Law?

This column is prepared as a public service by the College of Law, Willamette University, Salem, to explain basic legal principles, not to provide legal advice. The reader is cautioned not to apply these cases to his own problems without an attorney's advice, for differing facts may change the outcome.

Old Laws Forbid Camel Hunts, Six-Second Kisses

Anyone who hunts or shoots camels in Arizona is breaking the law. So is a fellow who kisses his girl for longer than five seconds in Iowa.

Such laws, however, are old, antiquated, unrepealed – and unenforced. Sometimes they have been the result of unusual pressures from a minority about inconsequential matters which the majority of people legitimately ignore. Many are recognized as foolish when they are enacted by a legislature or municipal official and, quite naturally, are never enforced.

Put On Shelf

After enactment they are put on the shelf to gather dust and are usually forgotten because they need not or cannot be enforced. Their only useful purpose is to provide a good laugh occassionally.

Such statutes are seldom repealed unless some eccentric character is elected to office who digs out the ancient documents and begins enforcing them – usually at the expense of enforcement of laws more important for the well-being of the community.

Only when these antiquated laws become annoying or a nuisance are they likely to be removed from the books. Usually it is enough that they are forgotten. Consider the difficulty or logic in enforcing these odd bits of legislation, all of them "law" in a particular city or state:

No Tombstone Ads

In Roanoke, Va., it is against the law to advertise on tombstones.

A Georgia law calls for the arrest of any citizen who goes to church on Sunday without a loaded rifle.

The only vehicle that a person under the influence of liquor may operate with impunity in Kansas is a wheelbarrow.

Boston has a law which requires a hotel owner to put up and bed down the horse of a guest.

A Michigan statute requires inmates of State Prison to pay for their own room and board.

A Los Angeles ordinance makes it unlawful for young people to dance together unless they are man and wife.

Kingston, N. Y., forbids bathing in the nude between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Six visits to the home of a Maryland lass is the equivalent of proposal of marriage in that state.

El Paso, Texas, churches are required to provide spittoons.

Dallas, Texas, required all dogs to display headlights at night.

SHOT IN THE HEAD—A hospital technician prepares Stanley Schwing, 14, for surgery to remove a .22-caliber bullet lodged under his skull as a result of a shooting accident in Indianapolis, Ind. The boy was found crumpled in a city park. His pal, Frankie Mack, 11, tearfully told police he was too scared to admit the shooting. Doctors reported that Stanley's chances of survival are good, but complete recovery is doubtful.

Two Union Jail Escapees Returned

La Grande– (UPI) –Two Union county jail escapees who fled Friday night were back in the lockup today.

Brow Provost, 24, was taken into custody about noon Sunday at North Powder and Larry Morand Cornelius, 16, turned himself in about 10 a.m. Sunday at a ranch house near the town of Union.

They got away after getting Jailer Jay Conley into the cell and throwing a blanket over his head.

Cornelius is being held for Washington state authorities. He escaped from the reformatory at Chehalis while serving time for auto theft.

Provost, held on a forgery charge, was scheduled to appear in court today. He has pleaded guilty to writing bad checks.

Robert Taylor's Wife Gives Birth To Girl

The mother, former German actress, Ursula Thiess, and daughter, Tessa, were reported in good condition. The couple also has a son, Terrance, 3.
