Semi-dwarf Wheat May Be Northwest Answer
Washington (Science Service) — Stiff-stemmed semi-dwarf wheat may be the answer for Pacific Northwest growers whose wheat suffers extensively from lodging, or being beaten down by the elements. The semi-dwarf varieties, Japanese-American blends, resist lodging and stand erect on fertile soil with heavy nitrogen fertilization. Scientists of the Department of Agriculture and the Washington, Oregon and Idaho Agricultural Experiment Stations are cooperating in developing and testing the grains. Because the milling and baking qualities of the semi-dwarfs still must be improved, the wheats probably will not be available to growers until 1963 or 1964, the USDA said.

STRIKE INSURANCE

Washington (UPI) — The Association of American Railroads says railroads "are actively considering" adoption of a "service interruption" insurance policy to protect them against certain losses growing out of strikes.

'Health Fair' Set At Kiwanis Event

A popular feature of the Kiwanis County Fair, Aug. 20-23, at the Medford Armory, will be the "Health Fair" which is being planned in co-

Participating organizations include American Cancer Society, American Heart Association, AA, Child Guidance Clinic, Mental Health Committee, National Foundation, and Jackson County Tuberculosis and Health Association. Grace Reimer, executive secretary of Jackson county unit of the American Cancer Society, and Helen Tweedy, Jackson County Public Health Association, are co-chairmen of the exhibit. The displays will be set up in the large classroom to the left of the lobby of the Armory. Films furnished by the participating groups will be shown at regular intervals during the course of the four-day event. Fair hours are 5:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, Aug. 20-21, noon to 11 p.m. on Saturday, and noon to 10 p.m. Sunday, according to fair officials. Two Area FFA Boys Take Top Spots in District Contest

Two members of local FFA chapters took the top two rankings in the Rogue-Umpqua district better farming contest ended recently. Art Gardener, Eagle Point, ranked first, and Leon Small, Phoenix, second. Ten chapters participated. The FFA members were judged on how well each prepared for farming judged by an interviewing team of Ralph Morgan, state supervisor of vocational agriculture education, Bill McKinney, North Salem High school vocational teacher and Jim Ross, state FFA treasurer.

The boys were also checked on how much they had done toward developing their own projects and were questioned on their knowledge of such general subjects as use of fertilizers, animal nutrition, and many other agricultural subjects. Gardener owns 28 head of Angus including cows, heifers and calves. This project was developed during the four years he has been in vocational agriculture. He started with one head of Angus when a freshman. He used money from summer work to help build up his herd. His project shows signs of hard work and good management. Gardener will attend Oregon State college this year where he will study agricultural chemistry. Leon Small raises nine head of registered Hereford beef animals for breeding stock. He raises his herd on 53 acres of dry land and 15 acres of irrigated land. He will show eight or nine registered beef at the 4-H and FFA fair.

BOATING MOST POPULAR

New York (UPI) — The leader among all "take part" recreation activities for Americans is pleasure boating, according to Sales Finance News. Not only does boating claim the most people participating — some 35 million — but it also claims the most total dollars spent, more than $2 billion a year, the publication said.
