Entry Deadline Extended at Fair

Deadline for individual entries in all departments of the Kiwanis county fair has been extended, according to Russ Jamison, manager. He said the deadline was extended to include late exhibitors. It was hoped that the change will encourage greater participation by individuals exhibiting in food, textiles, floral and land products departments. Entries may be brought to the Medford armory Wednesday, Aug. 19, from 7 to 10 p.m. and Thursday, Aug. 20, from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Entries brought to the armory after 3 p.m. will be placed on exhibit, but will not be eligible for competition, Jamison said. Anyone who has entries in any department is encouraged to participate, either in competition or only for exhibit. The purpose of the event is to stimulate interest in products of Jackson county, and only through the support of the individual entries will this be possible, he explained.

Mrs. Oregon Set For Appearance

Mrs. Oregon, Mrs. Dorothy Jean Chase, Eugene, is to arrive in Medford Saturday morning, Aug. 22, to appear at the Kiwanis county fair Saturday and Sunday. Her appearance is sponsored by Pruckers Piano house and Big Pines Lumber company in cooperation with the fair committee. Mrs. Chase recently appeared in competition with representatives from other states and territories in the Mrs. America contest. She will make several appearances at the stage shows, serve as hostess at a special booth, and be available for photograph and autographing sessions during the final two days of the four-day show. Plans call for her to be met by Miss Pat Rushton, Miss Jackson county, who will extend the official welcome, by representatives of the fair and her local sponsors, as well as local dignitaries. Mrs. Oregon cancelled a Portland engagement in order to make the appearance at the county fair.

'Snake' Batteries To Amplify Signals

Asusa, Calif.—(Science Service)—Signals sent along underwater communication cables will be amplified en route by 30-inch long "snake" batteries. Developed for the U.S. Army Signal Corps by Aerojet-General corporation here, the snake batteries are spliced into the cable every mile to boost the voice or teletypewriter signals. The flexible zinc-silver chloride batteries five-eighths of an inch in diameter, are activated when immersed in water. The snake construction enables the batteries to be wound on drums with the military communications cable.

Monthly Oil Change In Winter Suggested

New York (Science Service)—The average motorist should change his car's oil every month in the winter and every two months in the summer, but never to exceed 2,000 miles of driving, the marketing division of the American Petroleum Institute suggests. By setting a time limit on oil changing, the motorist does not have to worry about watching his odometer or consulting complicated charts that tell how different kinds of driving affect the need for oil changing, the Institute said.

INSULT TO INJURY

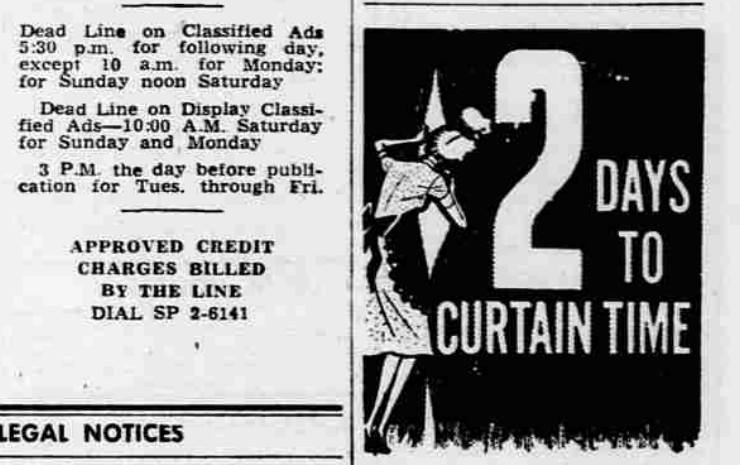

Boston (UP)—While ascending the escalator in a Boston department store, an elderly woman dropped a quarter which rolled down into the machinery and, after a crunching roar, stopped it. It took all day and all night to repair the damage. Next morning, the little old lady showed up demanding that her quarter be returned to her.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor and a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Lorraine G.—I want to stay in the business. Bert G.—She belongs home with the kids.

Lorraine G.—Three years ago, when our youngest child reached school age, my husband asked me to get a housekeeper and to help him out in his business. I was glad to do this because I had a lot of business experience before marriage.

After having worked five days a week, seven hours a day in this business for the past three years, I find that my husband not only doesn't appreciate what I've done, but makes all kinds of ridiculous accusations and insinuations.

Now Bert wants me to quit the business. I feel that I've built up valuable good will and contacts that will help increase our income. For the children's sake I think I should stay here. I want to put my entire salary in a fund for their education.

Bert G.—For the children's sake! That's a laugh! It's for her own sake that Lorraine likes to hang around here.

She's built up good will, sure, if that's what you want to call it. As soon as she came to work here she dyed her hair blonde and got a lot of sexy looking clothing. Now when the male customers come in they refuse to let me wait on them. They'll wait indefinitely for her. It's the same with the salesmen. They ignore me. You'd think she pays the bills.

As a result of the way she carries on, I've gotten the reputation of being a grouch and a louse. A house divided against itself cannot stand is what I always say. In the long run this is going to be harmful to the business and to our home. She belongs home with the kids.

The Council: As we get the picture, Lorraine is being fired because she has handled her job too well. Bert doesn't accuse her of unfaithfulness, nor does he suggest that he seriously worries about any personal involvement of hers with customers or salesmen. He is merely jealous of her power as a businesswoman. He accuses her of using sex appeal to bolster this power.

Well, we doubt whether this is Lorraine's only appeal. An attractive woman may draw customers, but it takes more than that to make sales and create a steady following. Lorraine's blonde curls are merely frills on some more vital characteristics.

Bert would be a wise man if he could recognize these things—and accept without jealousy the fact that his wife is a valuable asset to this business. He will not get the reputation of being a grouch and a louse unless he acts like one. He can be excellent foil to his wife's attractions by playing the serious, highly dependable role. It could be an unbeatable combination.

If Bert cannot come to terms with himself in this issue, we think it might be best for Lorraine to step out of the business. It is certainly not wise to undermine this man's morale for the sake of a few extra dollars. The children will be better off with less money and a happier father.

Russian Premier Could See Many Science Works

Washington—(Science Service)—Even though Russia's Premier Nikita Khrushchev has refused to see any rockets when he visits the U. S., he could see many of this country's top scientific establishments devoted to peaceful purposes.

Within half an hour of the nation's capital, for instance, is located the National Institutes of Health, its six divisions devoted to research aimed at making Americans healthier and longer-lived than they already are. Hundreds of scientists are at work there in many fields, from a search for a cancer cure to methods of combating arthritis.

Larry Horton, chairman of the exhibit committee, announced new arrangements for the Rose Society display. Some exhibits will be brought to the armory for display on Thursday and Friday, but the majority of rose fanciers will bring entries to the armory Saturday for display during the final two days of the event.

The change was made to allow greater participation by Rose Society members who will not be able to exhibit at certain times, and to assure the public a continuing, fresh display of outstanding rose varieties grown in this area.

As an ex-miner, Khrushchev could learn about the efficient ways in which the U. S. mines coal from the chief of the Bureau of Mines here. (Or perhaps do some research in human relations and learn how the U. S. handles its labor problems by talking to another ex-miner, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.)

In the field of physical sciences, there is also in Washington the National Bureau of Standards where both basic and applied research are conducted in fields from radio propagation to the spin of atoms.

If Khrushchev goes to Chicago, as has been suggested, he will find many outstanding scientific establishments, including the Atomic Energy Commission's Argonne National Laboratory at nearby Lemont, Ill., where much work on the peaceful uses of atomic power is being done. At the University of Chicago there is a plaque commemorating man's first harnessing of the atom, in the atomic pile establishing a chain reaction that became self-sustaining on Dec. 2, 1942.

Caliber of Research In New York and its immediate surroundings, also, Khrushchev will find many outstanding scientific establishments. It might open his eyes to see the excellent caliber of basic research conducted by capitalist organizations, such as the Bell Telephone Laboratories, or by philanthropic groups, such as supported by Rockefeller Foundation.

Near San Francisco, a good example of the kind of basic research conducted by universities can be seen on the Stanford University campus. This university is planning to build, with the strong approval of President Eisenhower and with Federal funds, a linear accelerator two miles in length, in which atomic particles will be speeded up until they are traveling at close to the velocity of light.
