STEREO MUSIC SOUNDS BETTER ON A WEBCOR

Vice President Nixon

For example, he was very fond of his oldest brother, Harold, who died of tuberculosis when he was 33, and Richard was 20. When he heard the news, he turned pale and very quiet. He reacted the same way when my youngest boy, Arthur, died at 7 from tubercular meningitis. Richard never cried. He only sat in his room and stared out of the window.

He could take physical pain with the same lack of outward emotion.

I remember once when the horses bolted and Richard fell out of our buggy. There was a deep gash in his scalp and he bled profusely. I raced him back to Yorba Linda, and a neighbor, with the only car in town, drove him 20 miles to the nearest doctor. Eleven stitches were needed, and Richard was in serious condition through the night. Yet he never whimpered during the whole ordeal, nor during the many trips back to the hospital to have the dressings changed and the stitches removed.

I have often been asked by friends if I encouraged Richard to go into politics. I didn't have
