Library Searching for Books Missing 180 Years

Newport, R. I. — (UPI) — Redwood library just never gives up.

It's still looking for about 275 books—missing since 1779, exactly 180 years ago.

And who else but British Army officers could have swiped them?

"After all," says Donald T. Gibbs, who runs what is the nation's oldest library to be located in its original building, "the British used the library for an officers club when they occupied Newport during the revolution.

"Maybe we're just making scapegoats out of them. But the fact is that when they left . . . well, you figure it out."

Search Authorized

Several years ago, stockholders of the library—Redwood is privately-owned with some 900 borrowers of more than 115,000 volumes—authorized a search to find and return all its missing books, about 575 in all.

"We've recovered about 300 of the books," says Gibbs, "but we doubt that any of these ever was in the possession of British soldiers. Chances are those have either been destroyed or are lying buried in some attic or cellar somewhere."

Gibbs said that the library will settle for books from the same editions as those that are missing. "All we want to do is restore the original library of 1,300 volumes that was established in 1747. We aren't too hopeful of getting the very same ones, but we try."

Gibbs said the most of the books believed to have been carted off by the Redcoats were "general in nature—philosophy, history, things like that." He said that chances are a good number of them never got to Merry Old England since the British evacuated Newport only to surrender at Yorktown.

Originals Not Found

The list from the original catalogue has been turned over to a London bookman who travels all over, hunting and picking. "And every so often, we get one from him. But so far, none have been from the original collection. And you can be sure we'd be able to tell if one did turn up."

Gibbs says the cost of getting the books back has been relatively small. The highest price paid for one of the volumes was about $70.

Have they tried looking in the Redwood library for any of the missing books?

"Of course," says Gibbs, "that's the first place we looked. No luck there . . . but every so often we check some particularly dark corner of a shelf."

About 90 seconds before a missile is scheduled to be launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., an automatic sequencer is set off and the rocket is fired without any further human assistance.

News About Books From the Library

The expression, "It's a dog's life," may indicate an unhappy state of affairs, when used elsewhere in the country, but not in Jackson county!

According to Jackson County Librarian Mrs. Jane R. Baker, library patrons are particular about what they name their dogs and much concerned with ways and means of making their lives as pleasant as possible.

The demand for books on the care and training of dogs has nearly exceeded that for the care and raising of children, she said.

With this mind, Mrs. Baker reports that the Medford library has in past years accumulated enough good, general books on the care of dogs to give the library what one would assume to be an adequate collection on the subject. She finds, however, that general dog books are not enough for the real dog-lover with his own special pet in mind—he must have a book which deals specifically and exclusively with one breed, the only breed as far as he's concerned, that of his pet.

Mrs. Baker listed new works guaranteed to meet each breed-fancier's needs, with nearly every popular breed of dog represented.

Other books purchased by the Jackson County library this month are included. These are available to all Jackson county residents, by request through the library's branches, or at the Medford headquarters library.

U.S. and Britain Willing to Extend Nuclear Test Ban

London — (UPI) — Authoritative sources said Saturday the United States and Britain are willing to extend their self-imposed ban on nuclear weapons tests beyond the original one-year period provided Russia also agrees to refrain from such tests.

But the big question was whether the Soviets would go along in view of announced French plans to explode an atomic device in the Sahara desert soon.

The United States and Britain offered last year to halt nuclear explosion tests for a period of one year, beginning Oct. 31, the day the two nations opened talks with Russia in Geneva on a treaty to outlaw all such tests.

Thus far, the representatives of the world's three nuclear powers have failed to work out any final agreement. The delegations agreed recently to recess the talks to give President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev a crack at breaking the deadlock in their talks in Washington next month.

Britain and the United States stuck to their agreement not to set off nuclear explosions for 12 months even though the Soviets nullified the commitment by testing nuclear devices after the conference began.
