Chessman Has Date With Death Seventh Years; Planning Not To Give Up

San Quentin, Calif. - (UPI) - For the seventh time in 11 years criminal genius Caryl Chessman has a date with death. His execution is now set for Oct. 23. For Chessman the wait "is a terrible, lurking, shapeless thing."

charges, eight first degree robbery, one grand theft, one attempted robbery, one attempted rape and two other sex offenses.

SHADY COVE Vacationers Are Listed

By EVALYN P. WATSON Shady Cove - Trail - Mrs. Walter Cross of Shady Cove has returned from San Francisco where she attended the funeral of her sister, Mrs. Mae Grisez, who died after an illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Barnett of Oakland, Calif., have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Pfeifer and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hammons of Shady Cove. Other guests of the Pfeifers and Hammons are Mrs. J. D. McClendon and son, Tony, of Palos Verdes, Calif.

Mrs. Thelma Kasmhan of Burbank, Calif., is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Chubb and family.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Brown and family and Mrs. Dorothy Brown and family are Ed's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Brown, of Lomita, Calif.

Mrs. Carroll Watson and daughter, Sheri of Shady Cove went to Hillsboro and Portland last week where they visited Mrs. Watson's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ridenour, of Hillsboro and attended the Centennial Exposition.

They were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bernt and family of Portland and went to Hillsboro for the celebration of the arrival of the Centennial Wagon Train. Mrs. Watson returned home Wednesday but Sheri stayed to visit Virginia Kienlen in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Art Levulett of Shady Cove have had several relatives visiting them. They included Mrs. Levulett's mother, Mrs. Myrtle Eachus of Fair Oaks, her sister, Mrs. Lawrence Skerving of Sacramento, and another sister, Mrs. William Finger and daughter, Lois, of Roseville.

Mr. and Mrs. James Collier of Shady Cove entertained at their home with a picnic Saturday honoring Jim's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Collier of Reedsport. Guests were Ben's mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Esten of Trail; his aunt, Mrs. Olive Blackford of Central Point, uncle and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Train and daughter, Denise, of Brookings, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Conger and son, Billy, and Riley Potter of Central Point, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hanson of Shady Cove.

Moving back to Shady Cove again is Marshall Waggoner, who is living in Mrs. Albert Esten's house. His daughter, Mrs. Jerry McCall, of Newberry, Calif., is staying with him and is employed in Central Point.

Mrs. Isabella Scott, mother of Mrs. Kenneth Hammons, of Shady Cove has returned to her home in Philadelphia after spending most of the summer here. A number of events were given in her honor while she was here.

Mrs. Eric Bauer and children, Lisa and Eric, and Laurie Strother of McMinnville are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Strother of Shady Cove. Mrs. Bauer is a daughter of the Strothers and the others are grandchildren.

Ray Briggs has been informed by an insurance company that there will be a decrease in rates because of the fire protection here through the volunteer fire department. There will be a reduction in rates on insurance on frame buildings up to 22 per cent, on masonry and brick buildings 15 per cent and on commercial buildings up to 40 per cent. However, the insurance man went on to explain that in some individual cases the insurance rates may go up instead of down because the property was not rated right at first. He advised all property owners who are interested in knowing how the new rates will affect them to contact the agent writing the insurance.

Elizabeth Cushman is now at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Cushman, of Trail after completing the medical missionary course at the Bible Institute of Los Angeles.

nia's "Little Lindbergh Law." This is provided for in cases of "kidnapping with intent of robbery, with infliction of bodily harm."

Chessman's efforts to escape the gas chamber, an all-time California record, have been successful mainly because the court reporter at his 1948 trial died before he completed transcribing his shorthand notes.

Another reporter finished the job. Chessman claimed he was denied due process of law because he was not present or represented at the court proceedings which first determined the accuracy of the record.

Hearing Ordered The U.S. Supreme court agreed with him in 1957 and ordered California to hold a hearing on the validity of the record. Chessman was to be present.

But the hearing ended with the court generally upholding the transcript. Chessman's claims of major errors in the record were rejected. This left his case where it had been after his sentence in 1948. He then resumed his appeals up through the state and federal courts.

His ultimate hope: a new trial and acquittal. What has made Chessman world-famous is the fact that he wrote four books in his death row cell. But prison officials long since have cracked down on his literary efforts. Guards started watching him closely after manuscripts of two books, written on toilet paper or concealed on carbon paper, had been smuggled outside of prison to a publisher.

In addition to "Cell 2455," his books were "Trial by Ordeal," "The Kid Was a Killer" and "The Face of Justice." Interest Excited

The Chessman case has excited world-wide interest. Those opposed to capital punishment regard him as a symbol of their campaign, especially since he was condemned to death for a crime other than murder.

But in U.S. legal circles, the delay of his execution has been called a "national scandal" and "a sorry chapter" in the history of American jurisprudence.

The late Superior Judge Charles J. Fricke, who presided at his trial, called the crimes charged to Chessman "worse than murder." He said he "never had less sympathy for a convicted man."

A pretty brunette who was a victim of one of the "red light bandits' sex attacks has been under treatment at a southern California mental hospital almost as long as Chessman has been on death row. About a year after she testified against him she began to show an obsessive fear of the convict and was treated for schizophrenia. Some psychiatrists reportedly consider her incurable.

Delores Lande of Kenai, Alaska, was a guest of Ed Larson of Shady Cove and also visited relatives in the area.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Harrington of Modesto, Calif., and Mr. and Mrs. Dave Weisbrod of Grass Valley, Calif., have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bert Clark of Big Butte creek, Trail.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Miller and daughter, Carolyn, of Marysville, Calif., were guests recently of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Vincent and family, and Mrs. Margaret Walker of Shady Cove. Mrs. Miller is a niece of Mrs. Vincent and granddaughter of Mrs. Walker.

Mrs. Adeline Carl has returned to her home in Shady Cove after having been gone for most of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Davis and daughter, Janice Davis, of Marysville, Calif., have been visiting the Davis' son-in-

Geneva Conferences Have Wide Range of Discussion Matter

Geneva - (UPI) - A conference on the standardization of the size and shape of sugar sacks may seem dull stuff compared with the sound and fury of an East-West Foreign Ministers' meeting.

But the dimensions of a sugar sack are serious matters for the stevedores who have to lift them and the unions who have to decide how big a sack can get before two stevedores instead of one should be asked to lift it.

The U. S. participated in a conference in Geneva last year on the size, shape and capacity of sugar sacks, and in other conferences on subjects ranging up to the prevention of surprise attacks and the prohibition of nuclear testing.

1,254 Delegates American officials here say the U. S. sent 1,254 government delegates to international conferences in Geneva in 1958.

The first seven months of this year, more than 400 official American delegates attended 49 different diplomatic meetings, including the recent Big Four Foreign Ministers' conference.

Whoever is U. S. secretary of state actually spends more time in the consulate offices in Geneva's Place St. Gervais than in any other one foreign spot.

It all started back during the Civil War, when the U. S. and Britain tangled after the U. S. stopped a Confederate vessel named the "Alabama" and removed some British agents.

The matter was negotiated here in Geneva. Since then, it's become a habit for nations to discuss their differences here. Other countries followed the example set by the U. S. and Britain, and it's now unthinkable to hold a conference between enemies - or at least non-friends - anywhere else.

Even the Japanese and North and South Koreans come halfway around the world to negotiate a repatriation dispute in Geneva.

The U. S. maintains a permanent staff of 39 Americans and 17 Swiss employees in the Geneva consulate, headed by veteran diplomat Henry Villard, 59.

But the staff is augmented by anywhere from two to 100 other diplomats from Washington the year 'round. In front of the Hotel Du Rhone next door to the consulate, a lengthy strip of curbing is permanently reserved for conferees' cars.

The U. S. this year has or will participate in Geneva conferences on such subjects as trade, transportation, electricity, coal, establishment of individual control books for truck drivers, balance of payment restrictions, sugar, restrictive business practices, steel, education, radio, copyright, seafarers welfare, tonnage measurement, timber, lead and zinc, standardization of conditions for sale of potatoes, transport of dangerous goods, elimination of future statelessness, prevention of accidents, mechanization of agriculture, peaceful uses of statistical terminology.

More than 100 international organizations, both official and unofficial, are headquartered or have branch offices here.

Geneva is the European headquarters for the United Nations, as it was prime headquarters for the League of Nations. The International Labor Organization, World Health Organization, the International Standards Organization (which measures the standard meter measurement annually), the International Bureau of Education, the U.N. High Commission for Refugees and the Inter-governmental Committee for European Migration all are headquartered here.

So is the World's Women's Christian Temperance Union, which regularly demands the sale of alcohol be prohibited in Geneva in the interests of international amity. Alcohol, as everyone knows, is a depressant.

PUB APPEAL Fryerning, England - (UPI) - The local minister, the Rev. William Mellord, requested that local pubs be allowed to stay open an extra hour here so that farmers can have their usual pint of beer after attending his harvest service.

HOT ROD Barton-on-Humber, England - (UPI) - The shiny, red, $11,200 fire engine just bought this Yorkshire village burned itself up Sunday in a fire it started itself. The engine's exhaust set fire to wheat stubble on the ground as it sped to a farm field fire.

What Is The Law?

This column is prepared as a public service by the College of Law, Willamette University, Salem, to explain basic legal principles, not to provide legal advice. The reader is cautioned not to apply these cases to his own problems without an attorney's advice, for differing facts may change the outcome.

Damages Compensate Victim, Punish Wrongdoer

Lucy Van Loom, a minor, walked into the Music Hall, a tavern owned by Paul Schneider, in order to see a friend who had promised to be there at the time to pay back a small debt.

Without any provocation on her part, Lucy was roughly thrown out by Schneider's son, an employee of the tavern. In the process of being evicted, she was slapped, pushed and kicked by both Schneider and his son, who also directed profane language at her. And she was carried downstairs in a "bear hug" by a police officer employed by Schneider and detained until a police wagon arrived to carry her off to the police station.

Not Seriously Hurt Lucy underwent this humiliating treatment in the presence of a large assembly of persons. She was not seriously injured, however.

Lucy sued for assault and battery, demanding $5,000 "compensatory" damages and $5,000 "punitive" damages. Lucy won and the jury returned a verdict for the total $10,000 in damages.

What is the difference between "compensatory" and "punitive" damages? Compensatory damages are those to satisfy or to repay any loss or injury suffered. These cover all loss recoverable as a matter of right and include all damages other than those in the "punitive" category explained below.

Compensatory damages may be awarded for bodily pain and suffering, permanent disfigurement, disabilities or loss of health, injury to reputation, wounded feelings and mental anguish.

Punitive damages are given in addition to ordinary damages because of the wanton, reckless, malicious, or oppressive character of the acts. They are allowed as a punishment of the wrongdoer and as a deterrent to the wrongdoer and others who might be so inclined.

Disc Jockeys End Underwater Play

Las Vegas - (UPI) - Four disc jockeys from station KENO have completed a 48-hour and 15-minute record-spinning marathon under water in the swimming pool at Twin Lakes Lodge near here.

The disc jockeys launched the musical marathon at 3:30 p.m. Friday and ended it at 3:45 p.m. Sunday. They worked around the clock spelling each other every three hours.

They remained submerged with the aid of 182-pound diving gear and announced the songs and commercials underwater while the records were played in the studio.

SPIRITED ARRESTS

Washington - (UPI) - Internal Revenue agents seized 18,908 gallons of moonshine liquor in July and arrested 800 bootleggers operating 680 stills, the Treasury department reported Sunday. North Carolina was the best hunting ground for the agents. They closed 167 stills and arrested 214 persons in the state.
