

Sen. Morse Urges Plugging Law in Hauling Explosives

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Washington Correspondent

Washington (Special) — Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.) has urged congressional action on a bill which would plug a loophole in the regulations on transportation of explosives — a loophole which he says brought on the Roseburg disaster.

The bill is S. 1806, sponsored by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.) and recommended by the Interstate Commerce Commission. No hearings have been held on it as yet in Magnuson's Senate Commerce Committee.

Morse said the bill would make all federal regulations covering shipment of explosives apply equally to private carriers and common carriers. He noted that the truck which blew up in Roseburg was not being operated as a common carrier, and therefore was not subject to the safety regulations set out in federal law.

"The Pacific Powder Co. of Tenino, Wash., was not operating the truck as a common carrier; therefore it was not subject to the safety regulations of common carriers," Morse said, noting that it was a company-owned truck.

May Be Cheaper

It may be cheaper to transport a truckload of dangerous dynamite and ammonium nitrate by private contractor, by a private truck, than by a common carrier," observed Morse. "But Congress cannot justify any exception in interstate commerce. That is what the ICC has been trying to get us to see, I find upon investigation. The Commission has been warning us that unless the so-called private trucks are brought under the safety rules and regulations with respect to explosives and combustibles, we might very well expect to have happen again what happened in Roseburg."

Morse recounted, in a Senate speech, the sequence of events at Roseburg — how the driver drove into Roseburg, parked the truck, set the brakes and locked the cab before going to a hotel.

"In the case of a common carrier truck carrying explosives or combustibles, the federal law requires that the truck go around all towns," Morse stated. "Even during the war, when tons and tons and tons of explosives were transported by truck in the area of Portland, it was necessary for the trucks transporting the explosives to be met by inspectors by whom they were guided around the city, to their places of delivery."

Would Be Illegal

"Yet we are now permitting these private trucks, operated by companies and are transporting their own explosives with their own trucks to go right through our towns, to be parked wherever the drivers please, to be locked up, to have the brakes set, and to be left unguarded while the drivers are otherwise occupied."

Morse said if the pending bill had been enacted into law sooner, the Roseburg disaster would not have happened because "the truck would not have been near the burning building, for the simple reason that it would not have been legal for the driver of truck even to have driven the truck into that area of Roseburg, let alone park it there and leave it."

The new bill carries penalties of up to $1,000 or up to a year in prison for simple violations of ICC regulations on explosives, or if a violation causes death or injury to any person the penalty goes up to $10,000 or up to 10 years in prison.

Antique Show Set By Chin Up Club

The Chin Up club will present its fourth antique show at the Medford armory on Sept. 2 and 3, it has been announced by club officers.

Antique dealers from Washington, Oregon and California will display their wares during the show, which will be open from noon to 9 p.m. each day. All items on display will also be for sale, it was stated.

The club, an organization of physically handicapped persons, will use profits from the show to purchase equipment for loans for disabled persons, whether or not they are members of the club.

Damascus Draws Many Visitors

Damascus, Ore. — (UPI) — The people of this tiny Clackamas county town figure they've had as many visitors as the Oregon Centennial Exposition in Portland.

Damascus put on another pancake breakfast and Dutch oven dinner Sunday and again thousands of persons showed up. George Livingston, chief here, said more than 250,000 persons had signed the town's guest book. "We figure that represents about 25 percent of all the people to visit," he said.

The Centennial Exposition in Portland had its one millionth visitor Sunday.

Police said Mintz suffered a cut nose in the accident.

Small Gains, Losses Noted in Stock List

New York — (UPI) — The stock market drifted lower today. While individual gains and losses ran past 2 points or more, the main list was a scramble of small gains and losses.

Goodyear was off around 4 at its low and Goodrich more than 1 in the tires. Most of the chemicals, steels, oils, motors, aircrafts and metals favored the downside. A few issues managed to counter with fairly sharp gains.

Upside features included Admiral Corp., Brunswick-Balke, Edison Brothers Stores, McKesson Robbins, Montgomery Ward, Richfield Oil, U. S. Gypsum and Viek Chemical.

Among the downside leaders were American Viscose, Crane, Litton, Minnesota Mining, Martin, North American Aviation, Polaroid, Reynolds Metals and Stauffer Chemical.

Family Council

Arlene J. I'm tired of trying to please Ken's parents. Kenneth J. We must try to cheer them at this time.

Arlene J. My husband and I are 23 and 24 respectively. We have been married nearly three years and are fairly happy—outside of the in-law problem.

Ken's parents are the problem — his mother particularly. She is very critical of me. She has told me in no uncertain terms that it's time I had a baby. She doesn't approve of working wives and always has something nasty to say whenever my job is mentioned.

I feel that she doesn't love me as a daughter and I don't see why I am supposed to shower her with affection the way my husband seems to want. My parents are far more up-to-date and interesting to talk to than his, but Ken says we have to spend more time with his parents. I am tired of trying to please them.

Kenneth J. Arlene sets up this competition about whose parents should get more attention. It's pretty silly and would be funny if there weren't some really serious factors involved.

My parents are still trying to recuperate from the loss of my older sister only two years ago. They are lonely and quite unhappy and I think we owe it to them to spend as much time as possible with them to cheer them. Arlene's parents still have two of the younger children at home with them. They aren't in need of any cheering.

Before we were married, Arlene used to complain about her own parents, but now she talks about how perfect her parents are and how awful mine are. It's true my mother is tactless at times, but she means no harm.

The Council: We hold no brief for Kenneth's mother's interference in the personal affairs of the young couple. Her comments are in bad taste and out of order.

This, however, doesn't mean that Arlene is justified in making snide criticisms of her husband's parents and taking a huffy attitude. It would be far better if she spoke up and told her mother-in-law in a respectful manner that the question of children and of her working are personal matters and that she prefers not to discuss them.

Arlene shows some resentment of the fact that Kenneth's mother doesn't love her as a daughter, but she shows little inclination to give of her love as a daughter. Possibly Arlene had hoped to become a kind of substitute daughter to her in-laws after the death of her own. She should recognize she is expecting a little too much. Yet she might have tried to offer some consolation in the form of real sympathy and thoughtfulness of her in-laws.

Like many immature individuals, Arlene has transferred her beefs against her own parents to her in-laws. She demands that parents be without faults, that they live up to her ideals. But she is a lot less strict in her standards for her own behavior.

Kenneth is justified in his desire to give his parents some special attention to this difficult period. Arlene should not allow childish petulance to stand in the way of showing her love for her husband by putting herself out for his parents. It may net her some rewards in terms of her own gain in emotional stature. (Copyright 1959, General Features Corp.)

Cars Damaged In Three Accidents During Week End

Although thrown from his car, Lester Pearl Stott, 26, of 24 Corning ct., Medford, escaped injury Saturday night, state police said today.

Stott told police that he was on Highway 99 in the inside lane with a car in front of him and started to pass, when a car pulled in front, forced him into the road divider near Blackwell hill. Stott's car blew a tire and the car veered out of control into a ditch.

Two cars received extensive damage Saturday night near the Lithia Drive-in theater and a number of children passengers in one car received minor injuries, state police said.

A car driven by Richard Goudie Cash, 30, of 1125 East Main st., Ashland was stopped on Highway 99 attempting to turn into the drive-in theater when a car driven by Donald Mervin Striker, 32, of 328 North Riverside ave., Medford, collided with the rear end of the Cash car.

Taken to Ashland General hospital for examination and released without treatment were Jo Anita Fern Cash, 26; John Albert Cash, 8; Barbara Anita Cash, 8; Bobby Ruth Cash, 6; Billy Cash 6; and Molly Mae Lowry, 9, all of 1125 East Main st. and passengers in the Cash car.

Extensive damage resulted to the rear of the Cash car and the front of the Striker car.

Hubert Steve Logston, 18, of 552 Eagle Mill rd., Ashland, escaped injury when his car rolled over twice on Valley View rd. Saturday night near the junction with Highway 99, police reported.

Heavy damage resulted to two cars during an accident in front of the Starlite Drive-in theater Saturday night. A car driven by Marion Leland North, 34, of 335 South Riverside ave., Medford, had stopped in the southbound lane to let traffic clear before turning into the theater. A car driven by Lillian Elva Hood, 45, of Bolz rd., Phoenix, struck the rear end of the North car. Heavy damage to both cars resulted, police said.

Vandals Ramsack Edson Residence

The 109 Geneva st. residence of Jack Edson, Medford architect and city planning commission member, was ransacked Sunday evening while he and his family were in the country, Medford police reported.

Police said the vandal or vandals took two $1 bills from a billfold, ate some cake, took cereal from kitchen cabinets, threw clothing, toys and other articles from closets and drawers about the floors of three bedrooms, set off numerous flash bulbs, spilled fingernail polish in the bathroom basin and smeared it on the medicine chest door, and spilled dusting powder on the floor of the dining room.

The only immediate clue, police reported, was a small footprint in the dusting powder.

Portland Machinists Join in Walkout

Portland — (UPI) — About 150 members of the International Brotherhood of Machinists here today joined a three-state walkout against shipyards.

George C. Salmon, business agent for Willamette Lodge No. 53 of the union, said an estimated 600 to 700 other workers would be affected. Members of the Portland local had authorized a strike in a vote Aug. 12.

Rocketeller Brings Bride To United States

New York — (UPI) — Steven Rocketeller brought his Norwegian Cinderella bride back today to the city where she once toiled as a maid in his parents' home.

The happy young millionaire and his wife the former Anne Marie Rasmussen, arrived by plane this morning to begin an American honeymoon that will last a month or more. Steven said he hoped he and his bride could give newsmen the slip.

"We would like to have the next month to ourselves," he said.

Site Not Confirmed

A source close to the Rocketeller family said the couple might honeymoon on the Rocketeller ranch at Jackson Hole, Wyo., or at the family summer home at Seal Harbor, Maine. But neither Steven nor his father, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, would confirm this.

"They're going to disappear, with your cooperation," the governor told the 30 newsmen who gathered at Idlewood Airport to interview the honeymooners. "I certainly think that they are entitled to some privacy without the family or the press trailing them."

Anne Marie, attractively dressed in a two-piece black shantung suit, was too shy to answer the reporters' question, except that she was "very much pleased" to return to New York.

Access To Social Whirl

The smiling bride will now have access to some of New York's most exclusive social circles.

Steven and Anne Marie were accompanied here from Norway by his father and mother and sister, Mrs. Ann Pierson of Chicago. The Rocketeller party was the last group to leave the plane when it landed after a flight from Copenhagen, Denmark.
