Something worth knowing: The people of the United States own about 43 billion dollars worth of U.S. Savings Bonds.

That represents about 15 per cent of the national debt.

BIG question: How did the people of our country GET these bonds?

The answer is interesting. They saved up the money, a little at a time, and put it into these bonds, which are designed specifically for just such a purpose. A lot of the money came out of payroll savings. Under the payroll savings plan, you instruct your employer to take so much out of your paycheck every week, buy savings bonds with it and keep the bonds for you, turning them over to you whenever you need them.

Meanwhile they EARN INTEREST for you.

THE chances are you don't miss the money as it is taken out of your paycheck. Then—

Some fine day, when you happen to think of it, you count up your bonds. You'll probably be surprised.

You may be AMAZED. All of a sudden, you'll discover that you're an INVESTOR. It's a pleasant feeling.

WHAT do you do next?

Well, MAYBE you'll discover when you count up your savings bonds that you have enough to BUY A LITTLE STOCK in a growing business. A lot of people do just that. According to the best figures available, some 12 MILLION people in our country are owners of stocks that are listed on the big exchanges. That will mean that from then on you are a partner in American Business.

If that happens to you, and if you like the feeling, just remember that it all started on the day when you instructed your employer to hold a little out of your paycheck each week and BUY SAVINGS BONDS with it.

ONE more word:

Some pessimist may get hold of you and tell you that because of inflation (which keeps prices rising constantly) your Savings Bond, when it matures, won't buy as much, interest and all, as the money would have bought when you started saving.

If that happens, consider this: If you had spent the money instead of saving it, it would have gathered no moss. And you would have no savings.

A WORD in conclusion:

The U.S. Treasury estimated recently the value of Savings Bonds HELD in the counties of the state of Oregon.

The figures are interesting. In the five counties of that we commonly call Southern Oregon, some 52½ MILLION dollars worth of Savings Bonds are OWNED by the people. The figures for California aren't available as this is written, but it is probable that the people of Far Northern California own as many Savings Bonds as are owned in Southern Oregon. That counts up to more than 100 MILLION DOLLARS. It isn't hay.

MEDICAL STEP FORWARD

East Lansing, Mich.—UPI—A way of finding many of the kinds and amounts of substances which tissue cells need to reproduce has been developed by Dr. G. Bernard Wilson, internationally-known cell scientist at Michigan State University. His work may lead to better understanding of cancer, which is actually the rapid reproduction of apparently useless cells.
