London—(UPI)—The Soviet Union declared Friday in a statement carried by the official Tass news agency that it would not resume nuclear tests provided the western powers cease their nuclear tests.

The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
 Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Clinic

Soviet Medicine

A recent study was made of Soviet medicine by five American physicians who traveled 8,500 miles, and visited 61 institutions in nine cities. Their report was published recently by the U.S. Public Health Service. The conclusion was that the Soviet physicians are poorly educated and have a very low social standing. They are "trade school graduates."

They receive six years of medical schooling in overcrowded and usually antiquated and jerry-built facilities. Naturally, part of the course consists of political indoctrination. Three-fourths of the Russian physicians are women. They are handicapped in their work by having to use less plentiful and less active drugs than we have. The level of sanitation in the areas visited appeared to be about 50 years behind that in our country. Much emphasis is placed on physical therapy and rest-treatment. The Russian doctors depend less than we do on laboratory methods of diagnosis. Clerical help and office equipment which is standard in this country is an unheard of luxury in Russia. The Russian physicians have done much to wipe out malaria and venereal diseases. Tuberculosis, however, is still rampant. It must be, with their awful over-crowding, with often several families in a room. The Russian physician generally has to go where she is told to go. Her basic salary ranges from $75 a month when she graduates, to $220 a month when she has been practicing for 15 years! By comparison, an air-line hostess gets $140 and a truck-driver gets from $120 to $160.

Anne H. Carlson, Ph. D. of Jamestown, N. D., has received the President's Trophy as the "Handicapped American of the Year." She is superintendent of the Crippled Children's School, in Jamestown, N. D., and has devoted her lifetime to the rehabilitation and education of severely handicapped children. She has done so well
