More Than 180 Earthquakes Each Year in United States

Washington — (Science Science) — The earthquake that shook Yellowstone Park is one of more than 180 earthquakes that annually disrupt the face of the United States.

Yet, the U.S. is not an active area for earthquakes, compared with other world areas. Most of the earthquakes in the U.S. are not severe, while from 20 to 50 quakes near a magnitude of six or higher are recorded daily throughout the world. This country experiences only six or seven of such severity a year, J. R. Brazee, seismologist at the Coast and Geodetic Survey here explained.

An earthquake is energy released by the fracture of rocks when stresses due to natural forces reach a breaking point. The amount of energy released is measured by a scale of magnitude ranging from one to 10. The magnitude of the Yellowstone quake was seven and three-quarters.

1811 Earthquakes
The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 is one of the most severe upheavals on record and had a magnitude of near 8.6. However, back in 1811, when this country was sparsely settled, a sizable earthquake juggled the land around New Madrid, Mo. It did not produce extensive human damage at that time, as there were few people there to be injured. It did create Reelfoot Lake, just across the border in Tennessee, however. Also, landmarks and the general outline of the surrounding terrain were changed. It is estimated that more than 2,000,000 square miles were shaken as a result of that earthquake.

The destructibility of such an earthquake is called its maximum intensity. This is measured by the amount of change rendered upon the environment and people living in the area in which the earthquake occurs. Since New Madrid was relatively little known in 1811, the exact intensity of the damage is not known although it is given the rank of 12, the top of the "intensity" scale.

Earthquakes occur most often between ocean shores and mountain ranges, such as are found along the western coast of the U.S. Many seismologists believe that this is the method by which the earth attempts to distribute its weight more evenly.

Public May Soon Demand More Family Doctors

Sacramento, Calif. — (UPI) — The public will demand an about face from the medical profession soon, calling for more general practitioners and fewer specialists, a psychiatrist predicted here.

People want their doctor to recognize and respond to the emotional needs of the patient, Dr. Daniel Blain, California department of mental hygiene here, reports in GP, Journal of the American Academy of General Practice.

Yet today, the emphasis is upon more specialization, more and more carving of the patient into definite areas and a tendency to treat only one of these areas. Doctors tend to pay more attention to the patient's X-rays and microscopic evidence than to their reaction to the patient himself or to a general observation of the patient.

New York Police Round Up Youths

New York — (UPI) — Police rounded up 15 youths Sunday night and early today for questioning in the slaying of two 16-year-old boys in the latest outbreak of teen-age violence.

Chief of Detectives James B. Leggett said at least two of the youths would be charged with murder and the others would be charged with unlawful assembly or held as material witnesses.

Mountain Climber Killed in Tumble

Sedro Woolley, Wash. — (UPI) — Don Grimlund, about 25, Seattle, was killed Sunday on Mount Johannesberg, 50 miles east of here, when a rock bounded down the mountain-side and knocked him over a cliff.

Other members of the climbing party Grimlund was with told Skagit county authorities they tried to reach Grimlund's body Sunday, but were unable to do so. The mountaineers said they would make another attempt to recover the body today if it stops snowing on the mountain.

Black Bear Killed In Seattle Area

Seattle — (UPI) — King County Sheriff's Deputy Joe Kaspler, who is at the right place every time there is a bear scare here, got his second kill of a bruin in Seattle's residential area Sunday.

A 300-pound black bear had been roaming around in the north end for more than a week. The switchboard in the sheriff's office was flooded with calls about the bear—the second this summer found roaming at will in the north end.

Frank Omera called the sheriff's office and reported the bear was in his back yard. A car in the vicinity, containing deputies Kaspler, Frank Pratt and Eugene Steinouer, was dispatched.

Kaspler spotted the bear and fired a shot which struck but didn't kill the bear. Another shot "twixt the eyes" did the trick and Kaspler had his second kill of the summer. The first bear he killed was also a north end "roamer" which he shot in June.
