The general said that while the chapter believed its operation to set up communications, aid the injured and stricken and provide emergency housing and food had been efficient, that as a result "I am going to completely rewrite the chapter's disaster plan."

He said that the chapter had emergency headquarters operating within a few hours, and that some 600 calls from all over the United States were handled within the next few days. A 24-hour operation on communications, food and other services was maintained as long as needed, the general said. He praised a Roseburg motorcycle corps for its effective service in relaying messages.

The speaker said that in reply to appeals for food and clothing, "we were flooded with material." He thanked the Jackson county chapter and the people of Medford and Jackson county for the aid sent.

In closing, General Beecher said that while Roseburg people were at first stunned by the disaster, they were now recovering and "Roseburg may be a better city as a result."

blood program; Mr. Williams, who announced a new streamlined first aid course; Mrs. Reter for the United Medford crusade and Jennings Pierce.

Many interesting points were brought out about why and how a will should be planned and made. A will correctly drawn may, at the time of probate, afford economy in procedure and expense many times its cost; it was said.

Mrs. Peterson stressed that making a will should not be considered only for older people, but for the young parent as well.

The Rev. William C. Piper gave a brief report on annuities. He also spoke of the difficulties that may arise if parents leave no will.

FDA Expert Talks on Food Myths

By ZOLA VINCENT
Members of American Dietetic association in recent annual convention in Los Angeles heard Wallace F. Jannsen of the Food and Drug Administration in the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare explode a few modern as well as ancient myths and superstitions about food.

Declaring that food quackery is a law enforcement problem, Mr. Jannsen said that while many best-selling food products have excellent labels that comply with the law in every respect, there is a host of products that are, in effect, being misbranded by false information that does not appear on labels but is disseminated by many other channels.

He urged consumers to be aware of: "Shotgun vitamin formulas, loaded formulas, 'natural' and 'organic' foods, 'miracle' foods, 'reducing' products, mail order products, doorbell 'doctors', cholesterol and heart disease cure-alls and certain popular books on nutrition." He emphasized need for more consumer questioning and analyzing of magic claims for foods; urged organizations and food field agencies to do a better job of anti-quack information.

Parental Immaturity Said Juvenile Delinquency Cause

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
New York—UPI—When "teen violence" shocks a community, alarmed citizens blame everyone from magistrates to working mothers.

Statistically, more mothers are holding outside jobs these days than ever before. Statistically also, the rate of crime is at an all-time high.

But does this mean that because mom's away, the child will play his way into delinquency?

One government expert believes not.

Gardeners Plan Dinner Saturday

Central Point-Central Point Garden club will hold a potluck dinner Saturday, September 12, at p.m. in the home of Dr. and Mrs. B. R. Elliott, Hanley road. The event is for members and their families.

Mr. Jannsen further debunked the myth that all diseases are due to faulty diet; the myth that soil depletion causes malnutrition, the myth of overprocessing and the myth of subclinical deficiencies. Copies of "Food Facts Vs. Food Fallacies" are available on request addressed to the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

Nutrition authorities agree that the normal American diet now includes such a variety of foods that most persons can hardly fail to have an ample supply of the essential food constituents. Advice of a competent physician is needed to identify vitamin or mineral deficiencies and to prescribe their proper treatment.

To Cook Fish
Easiest way to "fry" fish is in a very hot oven, with only a little fat. No need to turn fish when it's cooked this way, and no greasy skillet to wash. Easiest sauce for the fish is ripe olive wedges, minced onion and pickle relish stirred into mayonnaise.

"But to analyze the causes for the other three per cent. Well, most authorities agree there are dozens of them... income, housing, locale, new nationalities moving into a neighborhood..."

"The fact that the mother is working is way down the line. I have talked with many thoughtful people on this—with psychologists, welfare and social workers, clergy. None blames her."

Often Better Mother
Mrs. Leopold said that often the working mother is a better mother, because she is an organizer, a planner. She may be more careful of her children than the non-worker.

"My own opinion is that the prime reason for delinquency lies in parental immaturity," she said. "Now how you get parents to grow up, I don't know."

"The immature parent often rejects the child, whether consciously or unconsciously. This lack of acceptance is going to lead to trouble."

Survey Indicates Children Wearing Ill-Fitting Shoes

New York—One out of every three American children will be going back to school in September in shoes that do not fit them, according to a national consumer organization.

The survey, made last spring in a New England city and a nearby rural community, showed that some of the children were wearing shoes as much as 2½ sizes too small.

A large number of the children were wearing shoes from one-half to two sizes too short. The consumer organization reports that the most universal cause of foot defects are ill-fitting shoes, noting that a recent check of schoolchildren in 39 states indicated more than half of the primary school pupils and 79 per cent of the high school students had some kind of foot trouble.

Dr. Benjamin Kauth, director of the American Foot Care Institute, commenting on the report, urged American mothers to "make the opening of the new school year an occasion to protect the foot health of your youngsters. When you buy your child new shoes for the new term, check that there is sufficient growing room in the length and width of the shoe before you allow him to walk out of the store," the prominent pediatrician cautioned.

The first step in getting a proper fit, Dr. Kauth noted, is to select footwear made of material which holds its shape. In this connection, he pointed out that "the canvas and rubber sneakers in which our children, teenagers and even collegians spend too much of their time cannot be fitted properly."

New Compounds
Without shrinking or cracking, new modeling compound dries to the finish and consistency of wood. It will not stain, is non-toxic, and can be used as it is taken from containers without adding powders, liquid or other ingredients. In its pliable state, it can be sculpted, molded or shaped. When left in open air to dry, it becomes so tough and stable it can be carved, whittled, chiseled and sanded.

To remove wrinkles from stored-away wool, gaberdine or rayon slacks, place them in a clothes dryer with two damp bath towels. Tumble for 5 minutes, then hang on wood or non-rust hanger until thoroughly dry.

Non-Slip Grip
You won't be guaranteed a better score or bigger vegetables, but the golfer or gardener who wants a non-slip grip on clubs or tools can have it. An aerosol spray gives an adhesive, non-slip coating to handles of equipment or hands. It washes off with soap. The can is small enough to tuck in a pocket or purse.
