Best Freezer Use Saves Homemaker Time, Money

By JEANNE LESSEM
United Press International
New York—(UPI)—Homemakers with more time than money can save both by using their food freezers for home-prepared main dishes and ready-to-eat school supplies.

Here are tips for making the best use of your freezer from a manufacturer of transparent plastic wrap.

—Main dishes freeze especially well in sauces and gravies. But cooking time should be shortened slightly to allow for additional cooking when reheating.

—Cool cooked foods promptly, and freeze them in one-meal portions. To cool soup quickly, immerse the filled freezer container in ice water. But remember to leave at least 1 inch head space in any container of liquid, to allow for expansion room during freezing.

—Omit potatoes from frozen stew until the reheating period; spuds soften and lose flavor during long storage.

—Use converted rice, not the quick-cooking variety, as a "binder" for casseroles. But when a crumb or cheese topping is called for, add it at reheating time.

—Don't waste precious space on fried foods which, except for French fried potatoes and onion rings, generally do not freeze successfully.

—Use a light hand with seasoning, making any necessary adjustments at reheating time. Freezing makes some flavors strong and bitter, such as pepper, cloves, synthetic vanilla, celery products and fresh onions. Curry may develop an off-flavor. Salt loses flavor and may increase rancidity in fatty foods.

—Unbaked fruit pies are good freezer fare. But custard or cream-filled pastries tend to become grainy, and mergues toughen.

—The morning marathon to get the children of to school will be considerably easier if you freeze a week's supply of sandwiches and cookies at one time.

—But avoid very moist fillings, such as egg or tuna salad, or fillings with hard-cooked egg white, which toughens. Other bad bets are raw, chopped, grated, sliced vegetables, tomatoes and lettuce, all of which lose crispness.

—Freezing makes mayonnaise and salad dressing separate. But imaginative, flavorful binders such as lemon, orange and pineapple juice make good substitutes. So do milk, dairy sour cream, applesauce, butter or margarine, a n e e d crushed pineapple, and horseradish.

—Sandwich fillers that freeze well include cooked egg yolk, peanut butter, sliced cooked or canned chicken, turkey or fish, canned or cooked meat, dried beef, roquefort and bleu cheese, and baked beans.

—To avoid soggy bread, spread bread for frozen sandwiches generously with the edges with soft butter or margarine before adding filling.

Crisp bacon, hard-cooked eggs, and mayonnaise make a tasty filling for sandwiches.
