Quips and Quotes

Fall is the season when you find out which won—the moth balls or the moths.
—Hal Chadwick

The husband arrived home one evening to find his wife highly distracted. "Oh, I've had a terrible day," she complained. "The baby cut his first tooth, then he took his first step and then fell down and knocked out the tooth."

"What happened next?" the husband asked.

"Then," she added in a shocked voice, "he said his first word!"

Recipe for Murder

Pensively,
she ate a heaping plate
of French fries, lima beans
and peas and steak.
(I nibbled a leaf with lemon
and salt.)

With a little sigh
she debated cake and pie
and compromised on both.
(I passed the sugar by.)
"You can see, I try," she wailed.
"It's not my fault.
No matter what I eat,
I can't put on a pound!"
(I minced her
I hashed her
I served her nicely browned!)

—Gwynne Schmidt

Ours! All Ours!

At last arrives
The day we prayed for—
The son we've loved
Two years, is paid for!
—E. A. Carl

"My wife is always spending money on gloves," the man told his friend. "Got 'em for every occasion, no matter how small. I wish I could stop her—it's an expensive habit."

The friend pondered the problem, then brightened. "Have you thought about buying her a diamond ring?" he asked.

"What's for supper?—I'm starved!"

...And Just Off Broadway

All we'll require when we come to retire
Is a house that we've dreamed up
together—
On a Tennessee hill by a Michigan
lake
Surrounded by Florida weather.

—Herbert Warfel

The quickest way for a wife to get the old car polished is to take a shine
to an expensive new one.

—Ken Kraft

An ironworker delicately balanced himself on beams high on a half-built skyscraper. Cranes swung machinery around him, pneumatic
hammers shook the entire structure, but he never faltered in his movements 30 stories above the sidewalk.

When he came down, a sidewalk
engineer rushed up to him in admiration. "How do you do it? What ever made you take a job like that?"

"Well," the ironworker said, "I used to drive a school bus, but my nerves gave out."
