The Medical Roundup
by Walter Tevis

Hodgkins' Disease
In a recent article in the Canadian Medical Journal, Drs. Warwick and Sellers reported that when 960 persons with Hodgkins' disease were treated with either x-rays, drugs, or surgery, the five-year survival rate for all cases was 29.7 per cent. But, as I said in a recent column, the earlier the treatment is started, the better the results. I have had patients who, when seen and well treated as soon as the disease started, went for seven or eight years before symptom's returned. But when patients came to me five or six years after they had first fallen ill, I could not help them much. Nothing then had much effect on the fever, itching, prostration, and loss of weight.

The wonderful good news that Drs. Warwick and Sellers now give us is that eight of their patients have survived for 10 years, six for 20 years, and four for 25 years or more! To many, this may not look like much of an advance; but to me it means much because it shows that the disease is not absolutely hopeless, as we used to think it was. I remember a man who, after being well treated with x-rays was perfectly well for eight years. Then he returned, complaining only of great itching. I couldn't find a single enlarged lymph node on him, so I had an x-ray man give him a treatment over his abdomen, and with this, he promptly felt well again.

Nose Bleeds
An occasional nose-bleed usually does not mean anything. I must have had hundreds during my life-time, and I have always been very healthy. Only very rarely is a nose-bleed so bad that a specialist must pack the nose thoroughly in order to stop it. Many a time, I have stopped a bad nose-bleed for someone simply by having him bend over forward, pinch his nose with his fingers, take out his watch and hold the nose for at least six or seven minutes. This gives a chance for the blood to clot.

If a child or adult has frequent nose-bleeds and rather severe ones—a physician should look to see if there is any discoverable cause. There may be a little ulcer where the nose is often picked, or, in a rare case, there will be a number of tiny tufts of blood-vessels which easily rupture.
