Leaders of World Communism Gather To Celebrate Red Chinese Victory

Editor's Note: Red China has rejected all applications from U.S. reporters for visas to cover the 10th anniversary of Red China and the visit of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to Peking. The following UPI dispatch is by special arrangement with the London Daily Express.

Peking — (UPI) — I watched the leaders of world Communism gathered in a massed array today 300-strong on the stage of Peking's vast new Hall of Congress.

They have come from all over the world, leaders of government, men in exile, men who do not own the label of Communist but men who jointly make up the power of Communism throughout the world.

They have come to the 10th anniversary of the Chinese Communists' defeat of Chiang Kai-Shek as to a shrine where they can declare their worldwide solidarity and plan for the future.

Leaders Stand Out

Party leader Mao Tse-tung and Premier Chou En-lai stood out in their soft-grey tunic uniforms. Mikhail Suslov, Khrushchev's lean thinking-machine and chief representative here, was in the place of honor. So was Ho Chi Minh, once a scullery boy in London, now boss of Viet Minh.

The president of Hungary, the president of Poland, the president of Bulgaria, they were all sitting at their desks on the vast stage.

The Panchen Lama, in his rich silken robes, sat immediately behind Chou En-lai. They were gathered together before an audience of 10,000—no, I'm mistaken, 10,000 people — sitting comfortably in this incredible building.

It is so huge it makes the United Nations building in New York look like a village meeting hall. It is modern and yet, the eaves have a delicate tip-tilt to suggest a Chinese pagoda. It has two soaring balconies, discreet lighting, and is finished in light oak.

Red Star on Ceiling

And on the ceiling is a gigantic red star. One after another, delegates walked to the rostrum to sing a chorus of praise for China and Communism and express contempt for the way of life as we know it in the West.

There was a Uruguayan delegate: "Our small country is confronted with a two-fold great historic task, to combat the aggressive United States policy in all its oppressive forms and to open up the road to agrarian reform."

EX-REPAIRMAN DIES

Torrington, Conn. — Benjamin Johnson, 95, former builder, rigger and repairman of the eight-oar rowing shells used by Columbia University crews, died Sunday, it was learned today.

CALIFORNIA WINTER
Art Consultant

Art Instruction Workshop Held

Effective teaching methods and techniques in elementary art instruction are being presented at a teacher workshop for 50 teachers and staff members of Medford public schools.

The workshop started yesterday, and will end tomorrow. Instructor is Mrs. California Winter, of Corte Madera, Calif., art education consultant for Milton Bradley company, school art materials manufacturer of Springfield, Mass.

Mrs. Winter, a member of a pioneer California family who helped settle Corte Madera, a town in Marin county, received her education in Marin county schools, and at San Francisco State college, where she majored in art education. She was a classroom teacher, elementary school principal, housewife and has been an art consultant for the past 10 years. She has presented demonstrations and conducted workshops for more than 50,000 school educators during regular sessions and summer sessions in schools, colleges, and Universities of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

The workshop is designed to acquaint participants with current art education philosophies and their application to various art media, such as crayons, water and poster colors, finger paint, construction paper and clay in developing creative thinking in children.
