

USW's Wage Policy Committee Rejects Industry Proposal

Union Plans To Set Up Further Negotiations

Pittsburgh—(UPI)—The powerful Wage Policy Committee of the United Steelworkers Union today rejected an industry proposal to end the crippling steel strike as "completely unacceptable."

However, USW President David J. McDonald said union negotiators would contact the industry bargaining team in an effort to arrange further negotiations, "possibly this afternoon."

"The Wage Policy Committee has made a detailed analysis of terms submitted by the industry to settle this dispute," McDonald told newsmen in a hastily prepared statement.

Completely Unacceptable

"These terms were rejected unanimously by the committee members as being completely unacceptable."

The USW's Executive Committee Sunday rejected the peace proposal aimed at ending the 83-day strike which has idled 500,000 steelworkers and 200,000 workers in related industries.

McDonald said he expected to meet with the Wage Policy Committee again this afternoon.

The union president said Sunday he would advise the White House by telephone on the status of the negotiations in the nation's longest steel walkout. However, no report of the conversation was forthcoming from the union, Washington or President Eisenhower's vacation White House in Palm Springs, Calif.

May Shift Talks

Eisenhower warned in meetings with union and industry chiefs last week that the economy-choking strike must end quickly. The President's words were taken to mean that he might invoke 80-day back-to-work provisions of the Taft-Hartley law if settlement was not near—possibly when he returns from his Palm Springs vacation Thursday.

Sources in Washington said Sunday night that the government may call the negotiators to Washington if an impasse is not broken here in an effort to "pressure" a settlement without direct government intervention.

If the talks are moved and still no agreement reached, the source told UPI, the government then would be ready to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act.

Russian Premier In Vladivostok

Moscow—(UPI)—Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev remained in Vladivostok today on his surprise visit to that Sea of Japan port.

Government sources here reported that Khrushchev had made a speech in Vladivostok on Sunday, but its text was not published here. It was expected to be released later today or Tuesday.

There was as yet no official explanation of why the premier flew to Vladivostok from Peiping Sunday instead of returning directly to Moscow, nor of how long he intended to stay there.

Grange News...

Greenhorn Grange

Yreka—The regular meeting of the Greenhorn Grange was held at the Greenhorn Grange hall in Yreka. Master Kenneth Bley presided.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bear visited from Hornbrook Grange. Both of them gave a short talk.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Cannon of Grenada are delegates from Greenhorn Grange to the National Grange convention in Long Beach, Calif. in November. Others to attend the convention are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bley and Mr. and Mrs. John Collie, of Yreka; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wheeler of Montague; and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Rolston, district deputy and secretary of the Greenhorn Grange, of Grenada.

Miss Carol Petersen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Age Petersen of Montague, received an invitation to be on the seventh degree "Trumpets Drill" at the National Grange. This invitation was read to the Grange members.

Attendance of the Grange was small because of the opening of deer season. Refreshments were served.

Government Intervention Expected in Dock Strike

Washington—(UPI)—Government intervention in the five-day old dock workers' strike was expected today in an effort to end the paralyzing tie-up in Atlantic and Gulf ports.

Federal officials were reported to regard the dock walkout as more critical than the 83-day-old steel strike. Hundreds of ships and millions of dollars of cargo are tied up in ports from Searsport, Maine, to Brownsville, Tex.

To Seek Court Order

Federal authorities prepared to seek a court order to stop walk-outs by two New Orleans locals of the striking International Longshoremen's association.

If they succeed, it may pave the way for similar injunctions to halt work stoppages in other Southern ports.

Action to halt the pier tie-up on both coasts under the Taft-Hartley Act was expected within two or three days unless there are signs of early settlement.

General Counsel Stuart Rothman of the National Labor Relations Board planned to ask the five-member board for permission to seek an injunction to halt the New Orleans walkout.

Hearing Would Follow

If the NLRB gives Rothman a green light as expected, his New Orleans office will seek a temporary restraining order from a federal judge against the strike by the two ILA locals. Then a hearing on the government's plea for a preliminary injunction would be scheduled. A temporary order could be effective for up to five days.

Administration Adopts Hands-Off Policy Concerning Oregon National Seashore

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Washington Correspondent

Washington (Special)—The Eisenhower administration is planning to take a hands-off attitude for the moment toward the differences between Gov. Mark Hatfield and Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.) concerning the creation of a national seashore on the Oregon coast.

This means that the administration will not come out for or against the pending bill sponsored by Neuberger for establishing a 35,000-acre seashore recreation area between Florence and Reedsport; nor will it take any stand on the proposal of the governor for creating such an area on the Clatsop Plains near Astoria.

The National Park Service strongly favors Neuberger's position. And a National Parks Advisory Board, composed of leading private citizens, last April recommended in favor of the Oregon Dunes as a shoreline area which ought to be preserved under the park system.

Secretary of the Interior Fred A. Seaton has never acted on the board's recommendation—and there lies a key to the administration's current aloofness toward the dispute between the governor and the senator.

Seaton and his top aides are convinced that the thing which has held back creation of national seashores, other than Cape Hatteras, has been a mistaken approach. That approach has been to introduce bills naming specific shoreline areas, where inevitably local opposition was voiced and succeeded in blocking enactment of the legislation.

What Seaton wants is general authority, granted by Congress, to go out and determine where national seashores should be established. He doesn't want Congress to specify where they should be.

Consequently, Seaton favors his own proposal, sent to Congress in May and introduced for the administration by Neuberger, which would authorize him to establish three national seashores and to spend $15 million in acquiring land. That bill doesn't say where they would be located.

Once Seaton is granted this authority, he and his associates at Interior believe the door will be opened for the first time to the establishment of a string of shoreline areas as seashore parks, as money becomes available. He doesn't want to start with more than three for fear the cost would force a slowdown in the current "Mission 66" program of improving existing national parks. More would come later.

Oregon Area Favored

Without doing violence to the principal of seeking unspecified authority, Interior officials have let it be known that they think highly of the Oregon Dunes area and that it would probably be among the first three selected by the secretary if Congress gives him authority. But that was before Hatfield came out against it.

Neuberger and other members of Congress take quite the opposite approach. They have introduced bills authorizing seashores at specific places in their home states. They want Congress, not the secretary, to decide where these parks shall be located. Neuberger's bill for the Oregon Dunes is but one of several in this category. Others cover shoreline areas in Texas, Massachusetts, California and Indiana.

The Eisenhower administration has not taken a position on these specific seashore bills. Although Neuberger has been urging the Interior Department to come out for his bill for Oregon Dunes, when hearings are held at Reedsport, the department apparently will not make this move.

Reports Customary

It is customary for the administration to file reports of its views on pending bills when hearings are held—but not during field hearings.

"We'd rather wait and let the people in Oregon hear our report," said a high Interior official. He denied that Hatfield had put any pressure on the department to prevent its filing a favorable report.

Reportedly two reports were in preparation—one favoring Neuberger's bill, and the other favoring only the administration's general authority bill. Unless there is a last minute change, it appeared that neither would be presented in the Oregon hearings.

Supreme Court Opens 59-60 Term

Washington—(UPI)—The Supreme court begins its 1959-60 term today confronted with a crowded docket involving racial issues, labor-management and Communist cases.

After a brief, formal opening session, the court planned to go into a week-long secret conference to determine which of the 300 or more appeals it will hear.

Results of the conference will be announced next Monday.

The largest number of cases demanding the court's attention were in the field of race relations. The high court already has agreed to hear arguments in three racial cases.

Tass, quoting an article in the Soviet Naval magazine "Sovietkiy Flot," said the Lenin could push through an ice pack 88 inches thick and make several trips around the world without touching port.

Lack of Agreement On Summit Meeting Issue in Britain

London—(UPI)—White House Press Secretary James Hagerty's comment that no agreement has yet been reached on a summit meeting became a British election issue today.

Labor Party Secretary Morgan Phillips accused Prime Minister Harold Macmillan of playing party politics with the summit.

Would Be Tragedy

"It would indeed be a tragedy if the prospect of a summit conference were to be worsened by Mr. Macmillan's clumsy attempts to bring the issue into the final stages of his election campaign," Phillips said.

He was commenting on Hagerty's report made in Palm Springs, Calif., Sunday. Hagerty in turn was commenting on a Macmillan statement that the summit was "all set," except for "the date, the place and the people."

Phillips, the Labor party's chief spokesman, said that "it was bad enough that he (Macmillan) should have taken the opportunity of President Eisenhower's visit to boost his government's and his own fading reputation."

Britain Votes Thursday

"It is intolerable that he should now play party politics on such a vital world issue. It can only anger and irritate our allies."

Phillips said it was interesting to note that Hagerty said the U.S. still was waiting to hear from Britain, France and West Germany before making any commitment to attend a summit conference.

The back and forth on the summit has been the one time when foreign affairs issues have played a large part in an election campaign. The nation goes to the polls Thursday to elect a new Parliament.

Macmillan was reported to have said last week that the summit date would be announced in the near future. He denied Saturday that he had said this, but added that the summit was "all set."

Today, with public opinion polls predicting a neck and neck election outcome, Macmillan appealed for a large Conservative majority to help him negotiate at the summit.

Asks for Big Majority

Speaking on an election tour in eastern England, he said "we are now approaching a most critical period in the relations between the Communist world and the Free world. If there should be a tiny majority, or a stalemate in this election, or a small Labor majority, I assure you that will not enable us to play the role at the summit we hope to play."

Air Cadets Faint During Inspection

Benson, England—(UPI)—Air Commodore John Whitworth walked onto the Benson Royal Air Force station here Sunday with the temperature in the 70s and began inspecting 300 cadets drawn up on parade.

Plop, plop, plop. Three cadets fainted. Whitworth carried on, but the plop plops became more and more frequent. Before he had finished, nearly 60 cadets had passed out and been carried away by medical orderlies.

"I have a few words to say to you," said Whitworth after the inspection was finished, "to all of you who are left, anyway."

Acheson Urges 'Unity' Group

Bonn—(UPI)—Ex-Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson has proposed the creation of a "high council" of eminent men to oversee efforts to increase unity among the United States, Canada and Western Europe.

Acheson told a German-American conference here that the council should include representatives of neutral nations like Sweden, Switzerland and Austria as well as men from the Atlantic Pact nations.

"They should be free, he said, to vote according to their consciences rather than as representatives of national governments."

The former U. S. official said the problems of divided Europe are now being tackled "in too narrow a frame."

"The allies west of the Atlantic should be included (in these efforts)," Acheson said. "This would offer greater flexibility."

"If you have problems, perhaps we can help to make them simpler. We need institutions to guide us along the common path."

India Sets Terms For Negotiations

New Delhi—(UPI)—India has notified Red China that there will be no negotiations for a settlement of their border dispute while Communist troops remained on Indian soil.

In a firmly-worded note delivered Saturday in Peiping, Premier Jawaharlal Nehru also advised the Reds that they will have to cease their "threats and intimidation" if they want border talks with India.

GOOD ADVERTISING REALLY SELLS!

When you tell them, they know. But when you sell them, they buy! And buying makes the difference in your business profits.

Apply this same thinking to your advertising. A listing in a business directory tells the public that you're in business. A timely, pointed ad in the Mail Tribune Classified Section tells 'em... and sells 'em! A Want Ad shows the customers that you have what they want right now... and gives them good reasons for buying it right now.

When you have something to sell... use the advertising medium that knows the difference between telling and selling. Use the Want Ads... they make the profitable difference!
