

Local Pathfinders Win First In Annual State Competition

Medford Pathfinders Sunday claimed the trophy as best club in the Oregon conference at the Pathfinder fair held annually at the Lane county fairgrounds in Eugene.

The Pathfinder organization is sponsored by the Seventh-day Adventist church for its young people, and is similar in scope to Scouting and Camp Fire groups.

Forty of the 50 clubs which comprise the conference, taking in Oregon and Southern Washington competed in the days events.

The Medford club, which placed second last year, has held the first place spot three times in the past five years which entitles them to keep the trophy permanently. They are the first club to receive a permanent trophy.

Blue ribbons were awarded the local youngsters in knot tying, marching, fire by flint and steel, and booth display, and they placed second in first aid demonstration and the 100 yard dash.

Track Event
Delbert Cline, who was Medford's entry in the track event, crossed the finish line only one-tenth second behind the winning entrant, Delbert, who was also a member of the marching team and competed in the first aid and knot tying contests, was awarded a Good Conduct ribbon in Medford last week. This signifies outstanding qualities of loyalty to church, school, and club, and leadership ability.

Medford's booth attracted attention with a camping scene depicted, complete with youngsters gathered around a simulated campfire listening to a story, a lean-to of lashed poles and fir boughs under which sleeping bags were spread, shelves, and a table with benches all made of lashed poles, and a fire in a barbecue pan over which club members baked apples, potatoes and bread on sticks. A Bible was also a part of the scene signifying the club's aim of linking spiritual and recreational activities. The booth earned the club the full 30 points allowable in this category.

Points which determine the winning club are earned, not only in the events at the fair, but throughout the entire year, based on the number of meetings held, and the percentage of attendance, regular reporting to conference headquarters in Portland, and all club members being in uniform.

Leaders' Awards
Special awards were presented at the fair to adult leaders of the various clubs. Mrs. Howard Brooks, Medford, received a star for two years of continuous work with the youngsters plus at least 30 hours specialized training, and Mrs. Almon Archer and Mrs. Oral Tucker were awarded stars for five years of continuous service and a minimum of 72 hours training.

The Medford club, with approximately 45 members, under the direction of Oral W. Tucker, is one of the conference's larger clubs. Bandon, with only seven members, competed in all events, and placed third. In 1957, when Medford held the first place spot, Bandon, which then had only four members, placed second.

The trophy will be placed on display in the Pathfinder clubhouse located on the Rogue River Academy school grounds on South Stage rd.

Retired Eureka Publisher Dies

Eureka, Calif. — (UPI) — John Holyoke Crothers, retired publisher of the Humboldt Times and Standard, died Monday following a long illness. He was 83.

Crothers was born in Quebec, Canada, in 1876 and moved to the San Francisco Bay area at the age of 12. He took his first newspaper job with the San Francisco Bulletin.

He moved to Humboldt county in 1911 to take a job as business manager of the Times and became publisher a short time later. When the Times and Standard consolidated in 1941, Crothers became president and general manager, positions he held until his retirement in 1946.

Khrushchev Tours Vladivostok Plants

Tokyo — (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev made an inspection tour of factories in Vladivostok Monday. Radio Peiping, said today in a Japanese broadcast beamed to Japan.

Khrushchev arrived in the Vladivostok city Sunday from Peking, where he conferred with Chinese Communist leaders. He is expected to leave for Moscow on Monday, and his visit is being celebrated with a number of anniversary celebrations.

"We just decided it was perhaps not a very good case."

Christianity's Tendency to Unite Discussed Locally by Visiting Anglican Bishop

The progress of the relatively-new tendency toward unity in the widely-split realm of Christianity is a "thrilling thing," to the Rt. Rev. Plumptre Wilson, Anglican Bishop of Chichester, in England.

The young prelate, a visitor in Medford yesterday, discussed this ecumenical movement, and a dozen other subjects, at an informal luncheon gathering of a score of Medford and Grants Pass business, civic and religious leaders.

He is in Oregon at the express invitation of Bishop James W. F. Carman of the Episcopal Diocese of Oregon. The Anglican church, or "Church of England," is the British equivalent of the American Episcopal church. The invitation was extended as a result of the world-wide assembly of Bishops of the Anglican communion at Lambeth Palace in London last year, which Bishop Carman attended.

Yesterday's luncheon was arranged by the Rev. George R. V. Bolster, rector of St. Mark's parish here, and dean of the southern convocation of the diocese.

Ecumenical Movement
Bishop Wilson termed it a "scandal" that Christians, who essentially are all working toward the same end, should have become so serious divided over the years, and expressed his gratification that the ecumenical movement, which began only some 50 years ago, principally in areas of mission work where theological divisions were less important, has at last gained momentum.

He cited the United Church of India, and others in the far east, as examples of differing denominations rejoicing in a common communion, both in theology and as to aims and activities.

In England, he said, there is a progressive understanding between the churches that there shall be mutual respect, and efforts to unite in practical goals. He spoke of the World Council of Churches, and its counterpart in different countries, as evidence of this progress. Mutual understanding, and friendly contact, he said, are the first steps toward a broader and deeper union.

Exchange Compliments
In England 50 years ago, he said, the various denominations exchanged brickbats today they exchange compliments. This, the Bishop indicated, is a measure of the progress in a short half-century.

Pope John XXIII, Bishop Wilson indicated, is greatly admired in European church circles, non-Catholic as well as Catholic, but it is not yet known how his attitudes will affect a truly world-wide ecumenical trend. But, he said, he and his colleagues have felt encouraged by the Pope's actions and statements so far.

Turning to the rather widely-publicized downturn in membership and attendance in the Church of England in recent years, the Bishop granted that "we have been down in the trough," but pointed out that gradually interest in Anglican church affairs is returning in England.

"Between the two World Wars," he said, "a generation grew up which one could say had been shocked out of its faith and this is the generation which are the parents of today."

But he pointed out that there is a new stirring of interest in spiritual matters in England, and that both young people, particularly students, and older people, are now seeing a stronger spiritual

Week Stresses Hiring Physically Handicapped

Editor's Note: This week is National Employ the Physically Handicapped week as proclaimed by President D. D. Eisenhower. John W. Sinders, chairman, Jackson county committee for the employment of the physically handicapped, wrote the following article in observance of the week. Sinders is also personnel officer and coordinator for the selective placement of the physically handicapped for the Veterans Administration Domiciliary, Camp White.

The President of the United States has, by proclamation, set Oct. 4 through 10 as National Employ the Physically Handicapped week.

Posters are being displayed throughout Jackson county telling about this program. When observing these posters, take a second to stop and think—the American economy of today is based on ability; ability to produce—where in my business can I utilize the abilities of a physically handicapped?

Industry must take the same positive action internally that citizens have had to take on an international basis to keep the country strong, and to do this we must look to abilities—abilities of the individual as well as abilities of the nation.

A physical handicap is not a job handicap where the individual is properly placed. The handicapped are not looking for charity nor to receive extra special job consideration; but they do feel they should be given equal consideration with the non-handicapped to compete for work without discrimination.

Rockefeller To Visit in Oregon

Salem — (UPI) — Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York will visit Oregon sometime before the Presidential primary next May 20, Gov. Mark Hatfield said today.

But Hatfield had no further comment on the visit or whether he had definite knowledge that Rockefeller would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for President.

It is generally thought that Gov. Rockefeller will vie with Vice President Richard Nixon for the Republican nomination, although Rockefeller has said only that he will make up his mind before the first of the year.

Two of the state's top three Republican officials have endorsed Nixon for the nomination. They are Secretary of State Howell Appling and State Treasurer Sig Unander.

Applying would like to see Rockefeller as a vice-presidential nominee on the Nixon ticket.

Hatfield plans to stay out of the primary and support the Republican primary winner.

Nixon will be in Oregon Saturday to dedicate The Dalles dam.

Movie People Eye Classification of Certain Pictures

Hollywood — (UPI) — The movie industry is considering adult classification of films because of a wave of criticism, Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, says.

Johnston told a news conference Monday that although he was personally opposed to any form of censorship, the association was discussing the matter of classification with

Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, women's and other groups. "The movie code has not changed so much. It is the subject material in books and other creative works."

Johnston said that the same people who complained a few years ago that movies were not adult enough were now complaining that they were too adult.

"Classification is a difficult matter," he said. "First, who is to enforce it; we don't own our theaters any more. Second, in other countries of the world there are laws by which theaters would lose their licenses if children were to see such films—even with adults."

"In this country, there are no federal laws governing the matter. The problem is, if we take it upon ourselves to classify movies, do we elicit the kind of censorship we have been trying to avoid and fight in various states?"

Johnston said there has been criticism of motion pictures in some instances for their adult subject material.

Many Films Imported
"But," he said, "we must remember, we imported about 760 films, and we produced only 218 in Hollywood. In all, some 288 pictures got the Movie Code's Seal of Approval and most of the criticism was directed at those pictures without the seal."

Johnston said that on a recent trip to France, certain high members of the de Gaulle government were concerned about whether some exported French films were giving a "false picture" of the way of life in their country.

"But I am personally opposed to censorship in any form," Johnston said. "The abuses and difficulties that it brings with it are greater than those incurred without censorship."

Wall Street Chatter

New York — (UPI) — It makes no sense, in terms of groups affected, to pin spot news as the cause of price movements, says Investors Research Co.

Discussing last week's market pattern, Investors Research points out that steels and autos, the two industries affected most by the steel strike, held up extremely well, while oils took another pummeling.

The reason for this, it notes, is that so-called "news" usually has been anticipated ahead of time, losing a good part of its sting.

Business Week cites the growth potential in non-woven fabrics, which represent a cross pollination between textile and paper technology.

Standard & Poor's outlook says Campbell Soup stands out as a "high-grade stock" and an attractive commitment for the conservative investor.

The Fitch Survey says Gamble-Skogmo takes on added lustre. This stock lends itself to a further gain under the stimulus of favorable developments presently in force and expects to rise over the period ahead, Fitch notes.

Industrial Acceptance Corp. has done well since it was recommended "but we do not feel that its future growth warrants its retention," says the investment bulletin of the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

Christmas Present Due Servicemen

Washington — (UPI) — The Defense department has announced that 8,500 officers and men will get the usual Christmas present of early release from service if their tours expire during the holiday season.

Men whose draft or enlistment periods expire between Dec. 18 and Jan. 4 will be released between Dec. 10 and Dec. 18.

The policy applies to officers and men in the continental United States. It also will cover personnel stationed in commonwealths, dependencies, trust territories, Alaska or Hawaii.
