Camp Fire Girls Receive Funds From United Crusade

(Editor's note: This is another in a series of articles about agencies served by the United Medford Crusade. Today's article discusses the Camp Fire Girls program in this area.)

The 60-hour work week of 1900 has given way to today's 40-hour, and in many cases, 35-hour week. As workers move toward the six-hour day, four-day week, Americans will be spending approximately 7/8 of their lifetime in leisure activities.

Most people want to use their leisure wisely and well. They want to spend more time in their homes, in handcraft and artistic activities, in sports and games, in having fun with their families, and in helping youngsters become alert, happy, responsible adults ready to meet the challenges of tomorrow.

This is what Camp Fire Girls in the Rogue valley and throughout the country are doing. The organization provides an educational-recreational program for girls seven years old or in second grade through senior high school age.

Men and women serve as adult volunteers. Women act as leaders, guardians, and advisers for Blue Bird, Camp Fire Girls and Horizon Club groups, and both men and women act as group sponsors, consultants, local and national council and board members, officers and council committee members.

Regardless of the position they fill, members of the Camp Fire Girls family have fun and do worthwhile things.

Adult volunteers find satisfaction in using leisure time to make camps ready for youngsters' summer fun or in taking Blue Birds or Camp Fire Girls on a trip that often teaches the volunteer as much as it does the Blue Bird.

Staying Young
Camp Fire Girls leaders and guardians of the Rogue Council say there is no better way to stay young, broaden their fields of interest and learn new or forgotten skills than by joining Camp Fire Girls. They have as much fun hiking, camping or cooking-out as the girls do. There is no greater satisfaction, they say, than the satisfaction of knowing the person helped a girl acquire a new skill or achieve a goal.

Camp Fire Girls' fathers share their know-how in sports and games with their daughters. It gives them an opportunity to display skills they have not had a chance to display in years.

One Campe Fire Girl's father admitted he has never felt more useful in his life than he did when he was able to explain to his interested daughter how a bill is passed through the state legislature. This is one of the things she had to know to earn her Camp Fire Girls citizenship honor.

Important Outlet
Men and women representing every occupation and profession, are finding an important outlet for their talents and energies by helping Camp Fire Girls.

Camp Fire Girls need more and more volunteers if the educational-recreational program is to be extended to the thousands of girls who want it. Their interest and energy are the things who wish to use their leisure time wisely and satisfactorily are invited to join Camp Fire Girls.

Camp Fire Girls in the Rogue valley are working members of the United Medford Crusade and it is through support of the Fund Drive that the Camp Fire Girls program is offered.

Timber, Road Problems Aired

Portland (UPI)—The U.S. Forest Service and Independent Timber Operators met here Tuesday night and discussed timber sales as they affect road construction.

Operators complained that although sales in the Clackamas river and Sandy working areas will be increased by the Mt. Hood National forest to 300 million board feet per annum over the next three years, they will have to reconstruct the Clackamas river highway to get the timber.

Walter Lund of the service's Timber Management Division said there was no alternative but to link sale of timber to road construction.

He said the highway's capacity will have to be increased along with the boost in logging traffic and the Forest Service has no funds to do the work.

Timber operators indicated they would take the problem to Sen. Richard L. Neuberger when his Subcommittee on Interior and Insular Affairs meets here Friday.
