Eclipse of Sun Tests Theory of Radiation Belts

Cambridge, Mass. (Science Service)—The suspected existence of natural radiation belts trapped in the sun's magnetic field was tested for the first known time by an astronomer observing the total solar eclipse from a jet plane flying at 35,000 feet.

Dr. J. Allen Hynek, associate director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory here, said it would take about a week to glean the desired information from the echographic photographs.

Polaroid Filter Used
The pictures of the blacked out sun were taken using especially made Polaroid filters at three positions. They will be scanned to see if light from the tenuous outer atmosphere of the sun, the solar corona, usually visible only during a total eclipse, is circularly polarized. If so, Dr. Hynek's jet flight will have proved a theory concerning the sun's magnetic field recently proposed by Dr. E. P. Ney of the University of Minnesota.

This would show that, like the earth, the sun is surrounded by a vast region of radiation trapped there by the solar magnetic field.

Ground viewers of the total eclipse, which occurred shortly after dawn on Oct. 2 in a 40-mile wide strip that included Boston area, were eclipsed by clouds. However, radio astronomers at Harvard College Observatory and the Air Force Cambridge Research Center, unhampered by the low cloud cover, reported that they had successfully recorded effects of the moon's passage on the sun's radio wave emissions.

84-Foot Antenna
Dr. A. E. Lilley, in charge of Harvard's radio astronomy program, said observations at 1,420 megacycles with the 84-foot dish-shaped antenna showed "some structure" in the sun but that about a week would be needed to analyze the data and draw further conclusions.

The AFRC observations were made with an 84-foot antenna, one of the largest in the U.S. Time will also be needed to analyze these data.

Appealed Case Is Tried in Court

The case of Walter D. Foley vs. R. E. Salter, appealed from district court by Salter, was tried Tuesday in circuit court by Judge James J. Main.

Judge Main postponed his decision pending submission of memoranda of authority by both parties.

The suit, according to court records, involves the recovery by Nunley from Salter of $242 plus interest in attorney's fees. District Judge E. Roy Bashaw had decided in favor of Nunley.

Judge Main set a time limit of 25 days for submitting the memoranda. Nunley is currently represented by John Chaney and Salter, by George Rode.

TROUBLESOME TWO
Buffalo, N.Y. (UPI)—Henry Gordon, 32, was sent to state prison for up to three years for slashing Howard Russell in an effort to collect a 25-cent debt.
