MEDFORD, OREGON, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1959

Women's Activities

When Wednesday Study club members gathered at Girls Community club last week for luncheon, it was the first meeting of the club's 51st season. Mrs. F. K. Deuel (seated) the only charter member still active in the group, was presented a corsage of pink carnations by the president, Mrs. L. V. Watkins, pictured here with Mrs. Deuel. Wednesday Study club has the distinction of being the oldest women's organization in the valley, and each club year carries on a program of book reviews and discussion for the education of members.

Mrs. C. W. Mitchell (at left) and Mrs. M. M. Morris are treasurer and vice-president of Wednesday Study club for the 1959-60 year. The women are pictured during a luncheon last week which opened the club's season. For the past 50 years the club has carried on an educational program designed to widen the member's intellectual horizons and keep them informed of national and world events.

Miss Annette Gray, who served as reporter last year for College Women's Club of the Rogue River valley, will be one of four women honored at the annual school of instruction of the Medford Mail Tribune's women's department, set for Wednesday, October 14, at the Red Cross building. Miss Gray reported a series of historical programs given by the club last winter and spring which were keyed to Oregon's Centennial year.

Mrs. L. E. McConnell (at left) and Mrs. Eugene Ingram, are among the members of Medford Junior Women's club working to sell the club's 1959-60 appointment and social calendar. Funds from the annual calendar sale are used to support the club's main project, a clothing pool operated for children. Last year, first for the clothing project, the clubwomen distributed hundreds of garments, either donated or purchased new, to children who otherwise would not have been adequately dressed for school. Mrs. McConnell is chairman of the project, operated out of Lincoln school, and Mrs. Ingram is program chairman. Mrs. John L. Holmes is calendar sale chairman.

Mrs. Bruce Cyphers, Wagner Creek road, Talent, will be introduced at the annual Mail Tribune school of instruction Wednesday, October 14, at the Red Cross building, as one of four honored reporters. Mrs. Cyphers, pictured here with her daughters, Carol, 8, in the third grade at Talent school, and Sharon, 3, was reporter last year for Talent Parent-Teacher association. This year Mrs. Cyphers is busy as the leader of Brownie Scout Troop 112. Mr. Cyphers is a member of the Talent School board.
