Hatfield Lauds Work Of Robert Sawyer In State Projects

By United Press International
Oregon Gov. Mark Hatfield Wednesday made the following comment on the death of Robert W. Sawyer, Bend, former publisher of the Bend Bulletin and prominent in conservation and reclamation circles for more than half a century.

Now that he is dead at 79 well-wishers may consider a monument of some sort to his memory. Judge Sawyer anticipated them. The city of Bend and to some extent all of Oregon will be his monument.

"Judge Sawyer in many, many ways contributed much to his state and I am most personally aware of the splendid way in which he provided for the century development of the Capitol Mall.

The Oregonian said "Judge Sawyer had strong convictions on many subjects and expressed them strongly. Unlike some editors he was willing to pitch in and give freely of his own time and efforts to help achieve the things his newspaper advocated."

"His foresight and adherence to principles in this project typified his activities in other fields. He was a public servant whose value cannot be measured."

It added, "Judge Sawyer was a clear thinker who expressed himself in the same fashion. He believed plain facts were quite palatable served up without garnish. His Bend Bulletin was an influential newspaper and he himself was an effective participant in struggles to achieve honest and efficient government, resource conservation and sound economic growth because of his talent for accuracy and clarity in his writing and speech."

Ex. Gov. Charles Sprague, publisher of the Salem Statesman, said "Oregon has lost one of its ablest citizens, one of the most constructive leaders in this century."

New Soil Heat Treatment Helps Control Diseases

Sprague said he also felt the loss of a "close personal friend" with the passing of Sawyer.

Los Angeles (Science Service)-Aerated steam at about 140 degrees Fahrenheit can be used to kill plant disease organisms in the soil, but does not destroy harmless organisms.

The Eugene Register-Guard said "in the last months of his life Judge Robert W. Sawyer cleaned out the files he had accumulated over half a century of public life. Some material went into the waste basket. The most valuable went to the University of Oregon library. Martin Schmitt, curator of the University's Oregon collection, said the evening after Judge Sawyer's death 'his waste basket was more valuable than most people's libraries.'"

This new treatment, which has proved effective in experimental disease control of field-grown nursery plants, was developed by Dr. Kenneth F. Baker, plant pathologist at the University of California here.

"Brother editors around the state cherished these notes in which 'R.W.S.' informed them they had used a word improperly or had overlooked a key fact."

The new method reduces recontamination of the treated soil by disease organisms, which usually occurs in the field from the air or nearby untreated soil.

System May Aid Power Reliability

Chicago (Science Service)-April may help in providing the consumer with more reliable electric power by offering a new tool to those industries employing remote control and telemetering.

The April system keeps an automatic typewritten code record of telemetering readings of demand, load, flow or other desired quantities at remote stations.

By making it possible to include a typewritten record of all operations performed or indicated over the supervisory system, such as the closing or breaking of circuit breakers, the system relieves the operator from keeping the necessary detailed records that can interfere with performance of his more important duties.

Antibiotics produced in the soil by the "good" organisms further limit those which cause disease.

Disease organisms re-establish themselves rapidly in soil treated by the old sterile method. Thus the disease may again attack plants, sometimes more severely than before.

New York (UPI)-More than 1,500,000,000 wood-cased lead pencils are used each year in the United States, or the equivalent of nine pencils for each man, woman and child, trade sources estimate.
