Playgoers See Ginger Rogers 'Pink Jungle'

Several Medford theater fans were in San Francisco Wednesday night to see the national premiere at the Alcazar of "The Pink Jungle" which stars Ginger Rogers.

Among the first-nighters were O. H. Bengtson, J. E. Robertson, his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Edward H. Collins, and Robertson E. Collins.

The musical comedy, plotted around a large cosmetic firm, also has Agnes Moorehead, Lief Erickson and Maggie Hayes in the cast. San Francisco reviewers noted that the play, produced by Paul Gregory, is big, expensive, too long and something of a hodge-podge.

Reviewers and playgoers also concluded that Miss Moorehead's comedy role is the best in the show, and that she plays it brilliantly. Those of the Medford group described Miss Rogers as beautiful and charming, and were of the opinion that while her role is the heaviest, it does not give her talents the opportunity which the Moorehead role does for that actress. The play was described as amusing and enjoyable, and Miss Rogers was especially praised for a comedy toreador dance.

"The Pink Jungle" will remain in San Francisco for a month and will then be taken to the east coast.

Miss Rogers spent part of last summer at her ranch on the upper Rogue river and was a guest at the opening of the Oregon Shakespearean festival season in Ashland.
