

New Secretary Talks for Nurses

Mrs. Yvonne Gardner, R.N., new associate executive secretary of Oregon Nurses association, was guest speaker at the monthly meeting of District 4, O.N.A., held at Sacred Heart hospital, October 13.

Mrs. Gardner stated that "for a more successful economic security program, the association needs more members and a more active participation in and understanding of the program by each individual member." The quality and quantity of the nursing care given to the public can only be guaranteed if more effort is put forth by each individual nurse," she said.

Convention reports were given by Mrs. Lila McDowell and Mrs. Joan Jensen. It was announced that orthopedic workshop will be held October 28, at the Red Cross building.

Teacher Attends Dance Seminar

Miss Colleen Hope, Medford dance teacher, flew to San Francisco last week end to serve as a member of the faculty for a teacher and student ballet seminar.

The annual fall seminar, sponsored by the Cecchetti Council of America, was held at the Sir Frances Drake hotel and was attended by over 70 west coast teachers and students. Miss Hope instructed a group of 70 students and taught them one of her original dances.

The Cecchetti Council of America was organized in 1931 by a group of ballet teachers who were seeking to provide a system of study and teaching methods that could be a basis of an international system of dance.

Hear Program on Dried Arrangements

Phoenix - Mrs. L. C. Gordon, Central Point, spoke on dry material and its preparation at a meeting of Phoenix Garden club October 9. She displayed several different materials for floral arrangements.

Mrs. Chester Parker demonstrated painting and coloring dried materials. Guests at the meeting were Mrs. Jennie E. Carmichael, Talent; Mrs. F. Jere Girard, Ashland; Mrs. Elizabeth Howell, Medford; and Mrs. Ronald Quackenbush and Mrs. Mary Papworth, Phoenix.

Photographer Bob Vroman spent a lot of time in the field (and in court) last week to take today's front page pictures keyed to autumn and the pheasant hunting season. Mr. V., whose camera artistry results in particularly fine nature pictures, spent three or four days in an effort to find just the right scene, mood and lighting effects. To say nothing of needing at least one pheasant to make the series complete.

Absorbed one evening in the double hunt for pictures and birds, the time slipped by. At length the photographer and young Jimmy Vroman did flush out a bird and bagged it. But it was after hours, and a policeman was at hand, and the embarrassed photographer was cited into court and fined.

As for photographers, the one pictured here looks slightly surprised. What's more, he probably looked even more surprised when he first saw himself in today's edition.

This picture was taken of Photog Kenny Knackstedt during the breakfast at Rogue Valley Country club which ended National Business and Professional Women's week.

The BPWC gals staged a hat parade during the breakfast, and not to be outdone by a bevy of Beeps, Kenny K. modeled a hat. The picture was obtained by devious means by the Tribune's society reporters.

"Haste Makes Waste," says the old proverb. It does, too. We proved it all over again Wednesday. That was the day the Tribune femmes staged the annual school for reporters. This annual event always puts Potpourri in a simper, in spite of the fact that we've been doing it for years now.

Before we arrived at the Red Cross building at the appointed time we'd made a dozen trips in and out of the house at home, in and out of stores and offices down town and in and out of the Tribune. We snagged and ran a stocking, scraped a big hunk of leather off a slipper heel, dropped our key case in a puddle of muddy water and almost-horrible thought—locked ourself out of the car.

Early in the morning we laid out our new wool knitted suit to wear and then heard the weatherman say it was going to be 80 degrees. So we changed our minds and put the black suit away and took out a silk one. About the time we left the house we remembered that the purse we had packed didn't look well with the suit and changed to a lighter one. We put in our billfold, coin purse, card case, compact, pencils, paper, pill box, lipstick, and everything else. But one thing. No handkerchiefs. When it came time to start the class we felt a sneeze brewing and there we were, without a handkerchief. So we borrowed one from Pal Peg. Funny thing, too. The same thing happened last year.

Somehow or the other, though, the school was held. As always, we forgot to stress some of the points we'd been thinking about all year and brought up others out of the back of our mind, to our own surprise.

Just as in past years, kind friends helped. Mrs. O. A. Eden and Mrs. I. E. Schuler loaned their silver services, Mrs. James Murray and Mrs. May Brown poured, and Neighbor Jeanette brewed good hot tea and otherwise ran the kitchen detail. Mrs. Murray and May B. even stayed on to help with the clean-up work, which is about the kindest gesture a friend can make.

The "Remark of the Afternoon" was offered by Mrs. Clarence Lack. Mrs. Lack, after hearing the usual warning about sprinkling copy with overworked words like delicious, beautiful, impressive and inspiring, heaved a big sigh and said "Can't I have even one little adjective?"

Mrs. Lack, who reports for Medford Garden club, insists the club does have impressive speakers and beautiful flower arrangements. The club editors still insist that reporters should concentrate on telling what the speaker said that was so impressive, and finding words which convey the beauty of the flower arrangement or decorations.

"If you want to see some gorgeous fall coloring, drive around by the Methodist church," said the voice on the telephone early Friday morning. It was Mrs. W. A. Arnold, and she urged Potpourri to take time out to look at the Virginia creeper which almost covers the building.

We did drive around by the church, and we agree with Mrs. Arnold. Never before has the coloring been so rich and vivid. Only an artist or a poet could adequately describe the sight.

Television Attachments Almost Do The Thinking

By MARGUERITE DAVIS

United Press International Chicago - (UPI) - New attachments for television sets almost think for themselves.

One gadget, a programmer, turns the set on and off and selects programs for 12 hours straight. The viewer needs only to push the necessary buttons indicating the time and channel of programs he wishes to see. Then the programmer takes over. Designed by Radio Corporation of America, it was introduced at the recent International Home Furnishings Show.

Another new RCA unit shuts off offensive commercials. The viewer can switch the audio on or off without rising from his chair.

Sylvania engineers produced an automatic timer that turns the set off at the program's end. This was designed for lie-abeds who fall asleep while watching TV, and for parents who want to enforce their edict of "just one more program."

A new system of power tuning developed by General Electric, actually is a miniature broadcast station. Electromagnetic waves of radio frequency switch the TV set on or off, turn the audio up or down, and select channels.

The unit has a range of about 35 feet, which permits operation from any spot in the room. Its nine-volt mercury battery in good for 70 hours of continuous operation. Other developments included:

-An on-the-wall set which can be installed in brackets on the wall and swiveled from side to side, or mounted in a floor-to-ceiling portapole and

For over-the-road trips, a shoe bag with pockets is indispensable. Attach to back of front seat. Use for storing sun glasses, maps, pad, pencil, glasses, cleaning tissue or sandwiches. Keeps car uncluttered and puts everything within easy reach.
