

Two Hearings Are Slated by Council

The Medford city council Thursday night scheduled two public hearings on appeals from planning commission recommendations. Both are set for the Nov. 5 city council meeting.

The first hearing is scheduled on a change of zone from Class IA to Class II, multiple family, for properties on Crater Lake ave. between Main and Jackson sts. The second is for a change of zone from Class IA to Class IV for property on Biddle rd. between Jackson st. and McAndrews rd.

Following a public hearing Thursday, the council approved a planning commission recommendation on a change of zone from Class IV, limited light industrial, to Class V, light industrial, for the H. R. Farr trailer court, North Pacific highway.

William Doernbach, 143 Mace ave., objected, saying there is an empty lot adjacent to the trailer court which might be used for residential purposes. If Farr should sell his property it would place a light industrial area next to a residential area, he said.

Used By Farr
Farr said the vacant lot is used as a leach field for septic tanks in his trailer court.

The planning commission had noted that the new trailer ordinance would not effect this property as far as zones are concerned. Farr must secure a zone change before he can obtain financing for planned improvements, City Manager Robert Duff explained.

Following committee study, the council approved an amendment to the building code fence provision. Under the amendment, a corner lot owner will be required to designate on a site plan which of the two yards abutting the street will be the front yard and which will be the side yard.

The amendment will permit the owner on corner lots to extend a back yard fence six feet high to the front yard get back.

The amendment resulted from an inspection of the Robert E. Crovette property at 300 Highland dr. Crovette had asked city permission for construction of a fence six feet high between his house and one next to him. The house is too close to the property line, he claimed.

A public hearing will be held at the next city council meeting on paving an alley between Central ave. and Front st. from Ninth st. to 10th st. A total of 59 per cent of the property owners abutting the alley have petitioned for the paving.

County Men Are Fined on Hunting Law Violations

Several hunters were fined in local courts Friday for violations of state game laws.

Among those appearing in district court were Donald Brood Gillaspie, 18, of 3032 Linden lane, Central Point, and a 16-year-old Central Point companion, both charged with spotlighting deer. Gillaspie was fined $150 plus $5 costs, of which $100 was suspended. The 16-year-old youth was also fined $150 plus $5, but in his case $90 was suspended.

Others appearing in district court were Robert R. Vro-39, of 2058 Roberts rd., and John Thomas Mardon, 52, of 310 West Jackson st., both Medford addresses. Vroman, charged with hunting during prohibited hours, was fined $25 plus $5 costs, of which $20 was suspended. Mardon paid a $25 fine plus $5 costs for failure to tag deer properly.

In Gold Hill justice court, Daniel Debster Piper, 43, of Kirby, forfeited $20 bail for having ducks in excess of the bag limit.

In Ashland justice court, two 18-year-old residents of that city were fined $15 plus $4.50 costs each for hunting during closed season. Lorenzo Dow, 69, of 437 1/2 Laurel st., Ashland, was fined $25 plus $4.50 costs for failure to tag deer properly. The cases of James Norman Williams, 22, of 645 West Valley View rd., Ashland, and Henry Lee Wol-

Better Integration of Curriculum Sought in District 6c Schools

Gold Hill Supt. Charles A. Meyer of school district 6C is working on the better integration of curriculum among the schools in the district. Since the district is composed of schools in Sams Valley, Gold Hill and Central Point, considerable planning and study is needed to bring about integration in an effective manner, he said.

One of the first phases of this curriculum integration being studied is in the field of science. Teachers from the six elementary and junior high schools in the district along with instructors from Crater High school have held two of a series of meetings to set up common goals, objectives and methods by which the integration of the science program can be obtained.

The first session was held at Crater High school to consider the science program in the district. The group discussed problems relative to making science classes more interesting; whether to coordinate the district in all grades; what should be taught in each grade; and the state guide.

Open House Sessions
Those attending believed that new ideas could be learned from other teachers during open house sessions, and it was recommended that other courses of study be examined, which may be secured from the Southern Oregon college children's library.

The group agreed that benefit could be derived by compiling a list of science experts or "resource people," who would visit the schools to talk or give demonstrations.

The second meeting of this group was held early this month to continue work on the science program. Ogden Kellogg, chairman conducted the session. A list including the names of 13 experts of various professions in this area were submitted at this meeting. Setting up a framework of what will be taught in each grade this school year was discussed, and the group decided to contact the administrators in the district for assistance.

ford, 23, of 341 West Valley View rd.—both charged with hunting during prohibited hours—were continued. In another Ashland case, Ray Richards, 38, of 764 Oak st., Ashland, was fined $15 plus $4.50 costs for hunting during closed season.
