Fat, Heart Disease Risk Said Proved in Acceptable Manner

By DELOS SMITH
UPI Science Editor
New York - (UPI) - Because of all the medical fish-tish over heavy people, it will come as a shock that a relation between a lot of body fat and a higher risk of heart-artery disease has been proved in a scientifically acceptable manner for the first time.

However, it failed to show that being overweight without being excessively fat imposes an added risk. To many that will sound impossible, but it isn't. A so-called "normal" weight for a person of your age, height, and sex is taken from a chart, like those on penny weighing machines. Other Things Excluded

The chart figure is the average weight of persons of your age, height, and sex. But it does not take into account other things besides fat which could push your weight above this average, such as a heavier than average skeleton and so heavy muscles.

Like interested scientists the world over, Dr. Kenneth Sanders was bothered by this. Almost all studies implicating body fat as a factor in the on-set of heart-artery disease were based on body weights rather than on body fat. He took 48 men who had had heart attacks. He "matched" them with 52 men of the same ages, heights, and weights who never had had a heart attack. Then he measured the amounts of fat on the bodies of heart-attack victims and the "controls."

There was no difference in how the body weights of heart-artery disease victims and of the "controls" compared to the "normal" weights for men of their ages and heights. But there was a most "significant" difference in the masses of body fat on the patients and "controls."

Sanders works in London and reported to the technical journal, "The Lancet." He said he had answered the question, "is coronary-artery disease more common in the obese." But the answer, he added, immediately asks questions, two of which are: "why?" and "how?"

Party Workshop Reviewed at Meet

Highlights of the recent Republican party workshop in Salem were reported to members of the executive board of the Jackson County Central committee during a luncheon meeting Friday at the Jackson hotel.

Mrs. Lester Adams discussed aspects of the precinct training sessions, at which GOP state leaders learned how to brief precinct workers on approaching the voter, keeping records, and poll watching.

Mrs. John Lynch, precinct educational chairman, and Mrs. James Ragland, county vice chairman, also commented on organizational procedures outlined at the workshop. Working in conjunction with Mrs. Lynch is Elmer Dahl, precinct organizational chairman, in charge of recruitment of party workers.

Sessions on local fund-raising techniques were attended by Mrs. Sherman Feiss who related salient points to the group. In summing up the workshop discussion, County Chairman Don Stathos remarked that it was encouraging to find Oregon party leaders and candidates of such a high caliber.

Cub Scouts

St. Mary's cub scouts held their first pack meeting on Thursday, Oct. 15, in the school auditorium.

A flag ceremony which opened the meeting was presented by Den 5 under the leadership of Mrs. John E. Rossi. T. W. Dugan lead in the opening prayer.

Dugan opened the meeting activities by introducing the den mothers and the newly formed committeemen to the parents. Following the introductions he turned the meeting over to Hal Krueger who has assumed the duties of cubmaster.

Helping Krueger this year on the committee will be Myron Hollen, assistant cubmaster; Dugan, committee chairman; Mike Alesko, membership; Albert Nelson, projects; Marlow Bates, activity; Earl DeLisle, service; Mrs. Pat Ford, advisor; and Mrs. Sue Jensen, telephone. Marlow Bates, activity chairman, had each of the cubs introduce his parents to those present. This was a get acquainted stunt which proved humorous and informative. Hollen gave a brief explanation of a newly formed Webelos den which is under his direction. Krueger presented the following boys with their Lion badges: Randy Dibble, Jerry Gritsch, Chris Olsen, Dan Stinson and Steven Williams. Den 6 which is led by Mrs. Jud Compton presented a Halloween skit. All meetings are to be held on the third Thursday of every month in the school auditorium. Den mothers are Mrs. Frank J. Gritsch, Mrs. Barbara Conley, Mrs. John E. Rossi and Mrs. Jud Compton.

Now kill tree-destroying orchard mice with ORTHO® Endrin

Kills both the pine mouse and the meadow mouse.

The pine mouse has a small body, small tail, Roman nose, sunken eyes and brown fur. He burrows underground and girdles the roots.

The meadow mouse has a large body, long tail, prominent eyes and dark grayish fur. He girdles the tree at ground level.

Ground spraying with ORTHO® Endrin is the most effective - most economical method for control of orchard mice.

Up until now, the control of orchard mice has been an expensive, time-consuming task. Previously used control measures such as hand-baiting, and the use of wire mesh screen, required costly hard labor and were not always effective. Now, ground spray with ORTHO Endrin gives you a sure, efficient method of control.

For complete information on the control of orchard mice, call your nearest ORTHO Fieldman.
