Widening of Goal Posts Helpful in Field Kicks

By PAUL DIETZEL
Head Coach
Louisiana State University
(Written For UPI)
Baton Rouge, La. — (UPI) — I was one of the coaches who disregarded the idea of the rules committee of widening the goal posts. When the rule was made, I felt that the best comment was: "It's great for goal post manufacturers."
How wrong can you be. I haven't had a chance to study the compilation of national statistics. But here at LSU we have had a most pleasant and surprising experience.
Our fine sophomore right halfback on the "go" team (our offensive starters) has booted four field goals in four attempts. That is surprising when you realize that up until a few days before the Rice game, we had not decided who would attempt field goals.
Wendell Harris was one of three we had to decide from. We chose Harris because he had looked the most consistent that last week.
In college, the kick is measured from the line of scrimmage to the cross bar, and as you know, the cross bar is 10 yards past the goal line. Harris' field goals have been for 33 yards versus Rice, 29 versus TCU, 26 against Baylor and 39 long yards against Kentucky.
That is certainly fine kicking, especially for a young sophomore. There is no question but that the widening of the goal posts made at least one of these four kicks possible.
The kicking game is one of the three phases of football that we at LSU attempt to stress. The other two phases are defense and offense. General Bob Neyland, who became famous as the coach of the Tennessee Vols, has always been one of the leading exponents of the kicking game.
Use Neyland's Tactics
Men who are in the coaching ranks who played under "The General" have used his tactics to great advantage. Bobby Dodd, Phil Dickens and the present Tennessee coach, Bowden Wyatt, are prime examples.
The kicking game is one phase of the game of football where a miscue can put you out of the game. A mishandled punt can lead to a score. In the "clutch games," one score is often the difference.

Southern Oregon Gridders Take on OCE This Saturday

United Press International
Portland State closes out its 1959 Conference football season Saturday as it collides with Eastern Oregon in an OCE clash at La Grande.
Oregon College of Education, seeking its initial win this season, journeys to Ashland to test the Red Raiders of Southern Oregon College.
Both contests are homecoming games for the host clubs.
Oregon Tech, already assured of at least a tie in the conference title race, tangles with McClellan Air Force Base of California Saturday night in a non-counting fray in Klamath Falls.
Portland State (1-2), at full strength, hopes to end conference play with a .500 average. The Vikings have won the last two contests between the two clubs and are favored to win the third in succession over the injury-riddled Mountaineers (1-1).
Southern Oregon (1-1), still in tie-contention, hopes to grab a homecoming triumph over the winless Wolverines (0-2). The Red Raiders will be out to avenge a 21-0 win last season.

UPI Hails Early Wynn Comeback

By FRED DOWN
New York — (UPI) — Early Wynn, a 39-year-old pitcher who believes in growing old gracefully, was hailed for making the American league comeback of the year today by the United Press International.

Wynn previously was named to the UPI's American league All-Star team and also was picked as the AL's pitcher of the year.

A 22-game winner for the Chicago White Sox, Wynn beat out Tito Francona of the Cleveland Indians by one vote, 7-6, in the comeback-of-the-year balloting. Eddie Yost, Hoyt Wilhelm, Gene Woodling, Bobby Shantz, Bill Tuttle and Ted Kuszewski also were mentioned.

Appeared On Downgrade
Only a year ago, Wynn definitely seemed on the downgrade as a top-notch pitcher. He had compiled a 14-17 record in 1957 and a 14-16 slate in 1958 with earned run averages over four in both seasons.

But Wynn's answer to his critics was a splendid season in which he worked 256 innings, had a 22-10 won-lost record, struck out 179 batters and had a 3.13 earned run average. He pitched five shutouts and 14 complete games.

The big year also put Wynn within reach of the exclusive 300-victory club. With 271 triumphs, he is leading winner among active major league pitchers and the first one in years to have a real shot at the 300-mark.

Wynn was acquired from the Indians Dec. 4, 1957 in a deal that sent Minnie Minoso to Cleveland. The 6-foot, 200-pound native of Hartford, Ala., broke into the majors with the Washington Senators in 1941.

Anglers Reminded of Closures In Rogue River Drainage Area

The Oregon game commission advised anglers today that the entire Rogue drainage is closed to trout fishing except that the main channel of Rogue River from Shady Cove to Gold Beach and the Illinois river from Kerby to its mouth remain open for steelhead over 12 inches in length. Bag limit for steelhead is two fish per day or four per week.

Tributary streams in the Rogue drainage closed to trout on Oct. 4 but the headwaters portion of the Rogue described in the angling synopsis and the lakes remained open to Oct. 18.

Howard Prairie reservoir is outside the National Forest boundary and is in the Klamath drainage so it remains open to trout fishing through Oct. 31. Diamond lake along with Squaw lake, Fish lake and Willow Creek reservoir closed Oct. 18.

Coach Sid Abel's skaters remained unbeaten after six games by bombing the Boston Bruins, 4-1, Thursday night with a three-goal burst in the final period.

The slow-starting Montreal Canadiens also popped in three goals in the final period to down the Chicago Black Hawks, 4-1, and move into second place, two points back of Detroit.
