
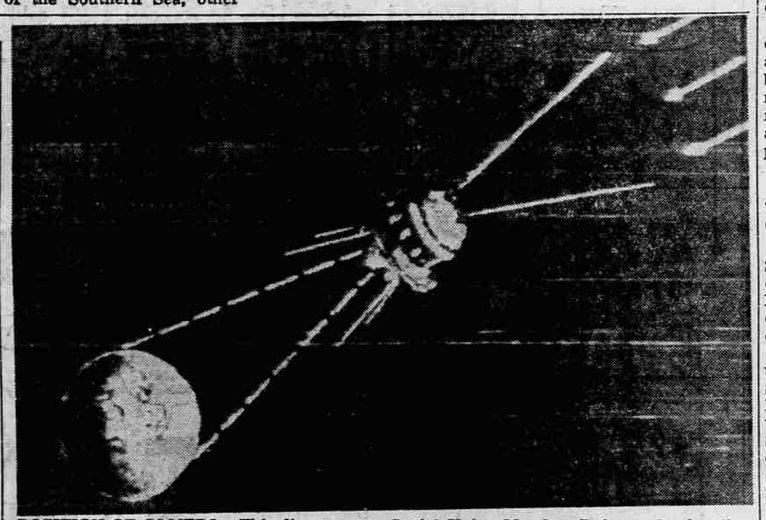
HIDDEN SIDE—This photograph, released by the Soviet Union reportedly gives mankind one of its first glimpses of the hidden side of the moon. The Reds claim this to be one of many photographs taken by their moon-circling Lunik III satellite and relayed back to earth. The picture was released Monday by official Soviet news agency Tass. In the photo, the left side of the dotted line is a portion of the moon previously seen and identified by Roman numerals. Areas of the hugh mass to the right of the dotted line were named by Russian Scientists. These newly-named areas are: (1) Sea of Moscow; (2) Bay of Astronauts; (3) a previously-hidden portion of the Southern Sea, other parts of which are located on the visible side of the moon; (4) Tziolkovsky Crater, named after a 19th century Russian rocket scientist; (5) Lomonosov Crater; (6) Joliot Curie Crater, named after Frederick Joliot Curie, a French scientist now dead who was head of the French Atomic Energy commission; (7) Sovetsky Mountain range; (8) Mechta (Dream) sea. The solid line across the moon shows its equator. Other circled areas are still classified by Russian scientist. To the left of dotted line, previously named areas are marked by Roman numerals. Photo and basic caption information from Soviet source.—(UPI Telephoto)



POSITION OF CAMERA—This diagram released by the official Soviet news agency Tass shows the position of Russia's Lunik III satellite as it photographed the hidden side of the moon. The history-making photographs, relayed to earth by the camera-carrying satellite, were released by the Soviet Union Monday. Before releasing the pictures. Russia announced it had already given names to many areas in that portion of the lunar landscape discovered and photographed. In the above diagram, the arrows at upper right indicate the direction of the sun's rays. —(UPI Telephoto)

Moon Expert Says Russia Will Land Rocket on Surface

London –(UPI)– One of Britain's leading moon experts said today that Russia will land an instrument rocket on the moon "in the very near future."

Such a landing may even be "imminent," Selenographer (moon scientist) Patrick Moore, who has many contacts among Russian space scientists, said.

Moore said the moon landing was part of a comprehensive Soviet plan to carry out so much basic research on the earth's own satellite that it will, in effect, "become Russia's own scientific preserve."

"There won't be much left for the United States or anyone else to do on or about the moon if the Soviet program proceeds on schedule," he said.

Moore said the Russians had completed two phases of their four-part program with Lunik II which hit the moon and Lunik III which photographed it.

Lunik IV will carry instruments to the moon and then, he said, will come the great adventure of trying to land a man on the moon.

"The manned flight is some years off," Moore said. But the instrument rocket is ready right now. Lunik III proved the Russians had everything—rocket power, guidance, telemetering devices—they need for such an effort except, perhaps, the reverse rockets for slowing up the space station at the moment of impact on the moon's surface.

"Compared to what they have already achieved, this is a comparatively simple technical problem. Once such a station reaches the moon in operating condition the only thing left for the United States will be to beat a Russian man on the surface. And that will take a lot of doing."

Obituaries

Pathfinders To Make Halloween Rounds Thursday

A "treat with no trick attached" will be given residents of Medford when youngsters of the Seventh-day Adventist Pathfinder club make their rounds Thursday night, Oct. 29.

The Thursday night date has been chosen this year for the annual Halloween event, as church members observe the Sabbath from sundown on Friday night until sundown on Saturday night and do not take part in secular activities during those hours.

Approximately 50 boys and girls, clad in Pathfinder uniform, plan to distribute hundreds of leaflets entitled "This is a treat for you with no trick attached." The leaflet contains a message of Christian hope and offers a free Bible correspondence course for home study of the Holy Scriptures.

Collect Clothing

The youth will also collect food and clothing from local residents to be used in preparing food boxes for the needy in the community to be distributed at Thanksgiving and Christmas time. Names of such families will be obtained through the church's Dorcas society and local welfare groups.

According to the Medford Pathfinder director, Oral Tucker, the youngsters collected 839 cans of food in last year's one-night drive, and were able to prepare a number of food baskets which they delivered personally to local families in need of assistance.

Some valley residents reported last year that they had contributions ready, but were not contacted by the group. Mr. Tucker explained that the youngsters have only one and one-half hours allocated them for the drive, and it will not be possible for them to visit every home in the area.

However, community residents who would like to have a part in the event, but fail to be contacted Thursday night may telephone the Tucker residence, SPring 2-6046, and arrangements will be made to pick up their contribution.

'The Show Off' Said Good, Family Play

Little theater fans who enjoy a good, family comedy filled with chuckles should see The Footlighters newest play, "The Show Off." Playwright George Kelly knew what he was doing when he wrote this warm, moving drama about family life and its problems, and it has remained a perennial favorite with actors and audiences alike.

Footlighters gave the first performance last night as an extra for the United Medford campaign. The traditional "first night" perforance is set for 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Little Theater at the Fairgrounds.

The part of the mother, Mrs. Fisher, in "The Show Off" might have been written for Ruth Kilbourn. She gives an absolutely splendid performance as the sharp-tongued but truly devoted woman with a boastful, bragging ne'r-do-well son-in-law who is a thorn in her side. Other members of the cast are adequate, some more so than others, but it is Miss Kilbourn who carries the weight of the play.

Oldest Daughter

Betty Lou Foster, cast as Clara Hyland, oldest daughter of the Fishers, and Larry Ware as her young brother, Joe, turn in the best support for Miss Kilbourn.

Al Reiss, playing the title role of the show-off and Brenda Hohensee, as the overly-protective wife, are cast in difficult roles which are almost beyond their talent and experience. Miss Hohensee looks pretty on stage, but tends to be too slow in picking up her lines–a fault found in other members of the cast also.

Reiss has the essential sensitivity for his role, but last night lacked the relaxed, breeziness which it needs.

Cast Completed

The cast is completed with Manville Heisel, who plays the bit role of the father rather well, Les Boardman as Frank Hyland, the substantial son-in-law who is such a contrast to the boastful Aubrey Piper, Joe Murphy as Gill and Mrs. Murphy as Mrs. Rogers.

"The Show Off" has many humorous lines, but one in the first scene never meant to bring a laugh, did last night. Mrs. Fisher asks "is there anyone out there?" and as far as the audience was concerned, it was a good question. There almost wasn't anyone out there. However, Footlighters are accustomed to small audiences which build up during the week.

When the cast shakes off the first-night jitters and Director Frank Buchter speeds up the action to the tempo required for this type of play, "The Show Off" should be well worth the small ticket fee and the time.–O.S.

Havana, Cuba–(UPI)–Pro-Castro youth groups have burned a large quantity of the records of Chilean singer Lucho Gatica in protest against his alleged declarations backing deposed dictator Fulgencio Batista. Gatica has been one of the most popular singers in Cuba and has made several successful personal appearances.
