Speech Improvement Another Facet In District 6C's Integration Program

Gold Hill - Speech improvement of elementary pupils in district 6C is another facet in Supt. Charles A. Meyer's curriculum integration program among schools of the district, which includes Sams Valley, Gold Hill and Central Point.

A syllabus, entitled "Speech Improvement Program," was presented by Donald Lacy, speech instructor at Crater High school at a regular meeting of the Teachers' association of district 6C at Crater recently.

A copy of the treatise was given to each teacher attending the meeting. The 31 page speech improvement program for the elementary schools of district 6C was compiled by Lacy with the advice of Dr. Kirt E. Montgomery, professor of speech at the University of Oregon.

The theme of the syllabus was dedicated to elementary pupils and classroom teachers with better oral communication of pupils as the desired goal. It is set up so that teachers can easily locate resources to help correct problems and better develop speech proficiencies in elementary pupils.

Complex Problems Lacy reminded teachers that the more complex problems should be referred to clinics such as directed by Leon Mullings of Southern Oregon college and help offered by the state department speech consultant should also be utilized.

He pointed out the dangers of limiting the scope and sequence on any skill subject such as speaking. However, he did state that there were six basic areas in which all elementary school teachers could contribute to their pupils' speaking needs. These are talking and listening; phonetics or articulation; improving fluency; voice improvement; effective delivery; and speech correction.

He emphasized that this teaching could not be accomplished by teaching each area

Hathaways Return From Trip to LA

Gold Hill - Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hathaway, route 1, box 221, Gold Hill, returned from Los Angeles recently where Mrs. Hathaway's father, Dr. A. O. Hendricks, was a guest on the television program "This Is Your Life."

Dr. Hendricks, who observed his 80th birthday and 60 years in the ministry, was eulogized by the president of the University of Southern California as one of the outstanding American educators and ministers of the 20th century.

A Swedish farm boy, he came to the United States early in the 1900s to earn five college degrees at USC, and later became pastor of the largest church in Los Angeles, teacher of higher mathematics and Greek at USC and president of two colleges. During the week, he received a telegram from President Eisenhower and about 200 cablegrams from all over the world. Twenty-four doctors to whom he taught mathematics were present, including three of his sons.

as a unit because of the great overlapping of the six basic skills. Lacy said the syllabus put emphasis on the speech problems and their correction as found in the first four grades, with some emphasis on the intermediate grades. It is his plan to prepare another program which will be concerned with the problems of older pupils.

Through the cooperation of Warren Holbrook, district 6C art supervisor, the handbook was published with illustrations to better emphasize the teaching suggestions.

Meyer told elementary principals and teachers that Lacy will be available for workshop conferences to discuss school speech problems and any individual pupil speech difficulties.

"The bank takes care of all my credit needs!"

Which farmer is speaking? It could be either, or both - or, indeed, almost any farmer. For banks serve the farming business with more loan volume than other institutional lenders.

Why do farmers choose the bank? Because - bank borrowing charges are moderate... service is prompt... there's no red tape... the location is convenient... dealings are confidential and business-like... other financial services are available under the same roof... and because the bank people are "home folk," who know local problems and take a personal interest in helping their neighbors with their credit needs.
