Revlon Ad Man Renews Charge Firm Knew of TV Quiz Rigging

Washington—UPI—The Revlon Company's former advertising chief renewed today his charge that officials of the firm knew that the television quiz shows they sponsored were "controlled" by the producers.

Members of the House subcommittee investigating rigging of TV quiz programs raised a question of perjury Wednesday when a former Revlon executive denied a statement by George J. Abrams, who had served as vice president in charge of advertising.

Abrams appeared before the subcommittee to repeat under oath what he had said in a sworn statement denied by Martin Revson, former executive vice president of Revlon, Inc. The cosmetics firm sponsored the "$64,000 Question" and "$64,000 Challenge" shows.

"The statement was completely true and correct," Abrams said.

Abrams, now an executive of the Warner-Lambert Pharmaceutical Corp., was called as today's lead-off witness by Chairman Oren Harris (D-Ark.) who said his affidavit and Revson's denial had presented "a pretty serious situation."

The witness, who said he had volunteered to appear in person, emphasized that participants in the weekly meetings of sponsors and producers of the two quiz shows "knew that the producers had the ability to control the destiny of the contestants."

Revson at Meeting
Asked to list those in attendance, he named Martin Revson among others.

"This is my honest belief, that everyone present knew," Abrams testified.

Revson told the committee Wednesday that "it never entered my mind that the producer could control it."

But Abrams, under questioning by Harris, said Revson definitely was among those aware of the producers' ability to "ask a tough or easy question" depending on whether they wanted an "exciting" contestant to stay on the program or a "dull" one to be eliminated.

Producers Steve Carlin and Mert Koplin have testified the two big-money programs were "controlled," that the sponsor knew it and made "urgent" suggestions as to who should win or lose.

Rep. John B. Bennett (R-Mich.) asked Abrams if there was "any doubt in your mind" that Martin Revson knew the producers were controlling the future of contestants.

"I find it very difficult to believe he wouldn't know, sitting in on these meetings," Abrams repeated.

He testified that Charles Revson, president of Revlon, "rarely attended" the weekly meetings. And he said he could not recall a single instance that Charles Revson "expressed an opinion about the destiny of a contestant."

This bore out part of the testimony given by Charles Revson Wednesday.

Abrams said that the "controls" of which the sponsors were aware dealt with the relative difficulty of questions. He said it was not until March, 1958, that any hint arose that contestants were being told questions in advance.

When Revlon heard charges to this effect in March and September, 1958, it began investigating.

"I have been asked what Revlon would have done if it knew of fraudulent practices," Abrams said. "It would have cancelled the show immediately."

Army Officer Denies TV Quiz Show Assistance; Turns in Resignation

Lawton, Okla.—UPI—A war hero who hit big money on a television quiz show fired a salvo Wednesday at charges that he was helped with answers, then resigned from the Army.

Capt. Michael O'Rourke, an advanced artillery student at Ft. Sill, near Lawton, Okla., won $106,500 on the quiz show "Tic-Tac-Dough."

In testimony released Wednesday by the House subcommittee investigating TV quiz shows in Washington, a former producer of "Tic-Tac-Dough" said O'Rourke had received help. But the producer, Howard Fleisher, hesitated to accuse the officer because of his Army decorations and service record.

No License for Fraud
Rep. Oren Harris (D-Ark.), subcommittee chairman, replied that he respected a soldier who offered "his life on behalf of his country, but that . . . does not give anybody a license . . . to return and commit fraud on the American people."

"He might be Gen. O'Rourke some day with responsibility for very large sums of money," Harris said. "If he is corruptible, it is well that we find it out."

Hearings concerning the show already had ended, and there was little possibility that O'Rourke would be called.

O'Rourke nevertheless issued a statement Wednesday saying he was resigning from the Army because "if I were to be called before the congressional committee investigating the television shows I would prefer to appear as a civilian or as an officer of the Army whose resignation has been submitted."

Resignation Accepted
His resignation was accepted by the acting commander at Ft. Sill, Brig. Gen. Vonna F. Burger, who said the Department of Army also accepted it.

O'Rourke was unavailable for comment after he resigned.

He had said earlier there might have been a "fix" in the case of another man on the show, "but not as far as I'm concerned." He said Fleisher's statement "surprised me very much."

Dog Has Opinion Of Lutheran Choir
San Mateo, Calif.—Mrs. Marion Seep wondered if the dog was making a subtle comment on the performance of the choir at St. John's Lutheran church here.

The stray pooch came out of the church with a song book in its mouth and buried it in the back yard.

East Berlin Bows To West Stand on Raising of Flags

Berlin—UPI—The East Berlin Communists bowed today to a firm Allied stand and announced they would not try to fly their flags in West Berlin Friday to celebrate the anniversary of Russia's Bolshevik revolution.

The official East German newspaper Neues Deutschland announced the Communist backdown in an editorial.

"We do not assume that flags will be raised at West Berlin railroad installations which belong to the German Democratic Republic," it said.

Troops Stand Ready
The Communist statement followed a warning Monday by the American commandant in Berlin, Maj. Gen. Barksdale Hamlett, that Western Allied troops stood ready to put down any trouble caused by the flags.

The East Germans had threatened to plant their flags on the elevated railroad stations in the Western sectors of the city to celebrate the revolution. They contend their operation of the railroad in both sectors gives them the right to the stations in the West. They put out the flags in West Berlin for the first time Oct. 7 to celebrate East Germany's tenth anniversary and rioting resulted when West Berliners ripped them down.

20 Avoid Provocation
Neues Deutschland said the Communists changed their minds about the flags to avoid "bloody provocations."

It said West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt "will not get his wish for civil war" and charged that such a war was planned by the West in order to block the path to the summit meeting.

Hamlett, a 50-year-old West Pointer, told the Soviets that the United States, Britain, and France would use their 11,000 troops to back up West Berlin's 19,000-man police force if necessary. He said the police would pull down any flags that were raised and troops would stand by for trouble.

Oregon Campaign By Symington Said Undecided

Portland—UPI—Rep. Charles H. Brown (D-Mo.) said Wednesday he could not say whether Sen. Stuart Symington would stump in Oregon if his name appears on the state's primary ballot as a Democratic presidential candidate.

Brown was here to talk to local Democrats about the possibility of the Missouri senator's candidacy.

Symington's name may appear on the Oregon ballot next spring, under a new law which permits the Oregon secretary of state to enter names of candidates generally advocated in the national press.

Not To File Affidavit
Brown indicated Symington would not file an affidavit with the secretary of state to get his name off the ballot.

"I don't believe any of those prominently mentioned for the nomination has the moral right to take his name off the ballot," he said.

Brown commented on the possible candidacy of Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.) in 1960 as an Oregon "favorite son."

Although Morse has declared he doesn't want to be on the ballot, a petitioner in Salem has said he can and will get the necessary 1,000 signatures and that Morse will be put up as a favorite son.

Of this, Brown said he thought Morse "deserves recognition and the state's loyalty."

He added that on his trip here he talked to some Oregon residents who support Morse's candidacy.
