Back Stairs: Eisenhower's Thriftiness

By MERRIMAN SMITH
UPI White House Reporter
Washington (UPI)—Back stairs at the White House: President Eisenhower does not have to go out and buy his own magazines, but nevertheless, he's thrifty about them.

Before leaving Walter Reed Army Medical Center last week after his annual check-up, the President carefully packed two current weeklies he had been reading in his overnight bag along with his pajamas and shaving gear.

The bag was sent down to the President's limousine a few minutes before Eisenhower departed. At the last minute, the President sent a hospital orderly and Secret Service agent to the car to open the bag and retrieve the magazines.

The President then took them to the hospital room of Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson and said, "here's something for you to read." Benson was in the hospital for treatment of an inflamed gall bladder.

The White House ran out of stamps the other morning. Had to send for some in a hurry.

Members of Congress can send out tons of mail with no stamps, just the congressional frank. But every piece of mail leaving the White House requires regular stamps.

This is the season when Washington newspaperwomen are unusually vocal about being excluded from certain stag press dinners, particularly those the President attends. Eisenhower has been to one this year—the White House Correspondents Association annual affair which is strictly stag.

Press secretary James C. Hagerly brought on the latest burst of female complaints by viewing the situation with mock alarm at a luncheon given for Mrs. Eisenhower by the Women's National Press club.

The ladies have been somewhat wary of kicking up any public storm about getting into two other types of stag dinners for the press.

There has been no known demand for female admission to the Gridiron dinners (most of the girls' bosses are members or guests). And Eisenhower seem to be under no pressure to include women reporters at private dinners he has given for the press.

The President has been told that the ladies do not like being excluded from press affairs which he attends, but his position has been that he's the guest, not the host.

As for stag dinners in the White House, he regards that entirely his own business. One sure way to stay off of an Eisenhower guest list is to make an incident of not being invited. A number of prominent Americans know this to their regret.

JOE WELCH, the brilliant Massachusetts lawyer who achieved national fame at the Army-McCarthy hearings, told Editor Curtiss Anderson, "Storms never frighten me. My intellect tells me I could get hurt or even killed, but is there any more graceful, natural way to die than by a sudden, beautiful stroke of lightning coming down from the skies? And I'd rather be hit by a tornado than some hellish machine built by human beings... I guess you'd say I simply have an attitude about weather!"

To prove his point, Mr. Welch has filled his Cape Cod cottage with a wide variety of weather instruments, with which he plots in detail the pattern of "good nor'easter" gales.

Overheard in a Hollywood studio (the mother of a precocious child star talking): "I put my foot down firmly on my daughter acting before she was five. I was determined that she should have a normal childhood!"

Washington—Department store owner Max Hess, of Allentown, Pa., charging that he had paid newspaper columnists and television shows to give him advertising plugs:

Washington—President Eisenhower, after being reminded at his press conference that his hour and 10 minute visit with New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller last week was the longest he has seen any visitor since Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev:

"This is the first time that I know that anyone was keeping a stop watch on me when I had a visitor."

Timperly, England—Mrs. Sheila Winkley, 27, who has given away two of her children, asking an American couple to come forward and take a baby she expects in February:
