Neuberger, Porter Say Oregon May Not Get Seashore Park

Editor's note: Following is a joint statement issued by Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.) and Rep. Charles O. Porter (D-Ore.) on the status of the Oregon Dunes National Seashore park proposal.

We believe it is only fair to warn the people of our state that there is a very grave likelihood that, while seacoast National Parks may be established in other states, none will be created at Oregon Dunes.

This disturbing possibility is due directly to the wide spread hostility voiced to the Oregon Dunes National Seashore Park by quite a few citizens of this state, including high public officials. Congress is likely to authorize such parks where they are wanted and not where they are violently opposed.

Twice Senator Neuberger has visited Governor Hatfield recently and been assured by the Governor that Senator Neuberger's modified version of the park bill would receive a fair and impartial study by the Governor's State Natural Resources Committee, which originally opposed the park. Despite these assurances from the Governor, the executive secretary of the Governor's committee, Mr. Dan P. Allen, published a letter in the Oregon Sunday Journal of November 1, in which Mr. Allen described the Oregon Dunes park as "an ill-advised and poorly-timed, etc. etc."

It should be kept in mind that Mr. Allen issued this abusive blast against the park and its sponsors after Governor Hatfield had promised both of us that the modified bill would enjoy a fair and impartial study from the committee which Dan P. Allen serves as executive secretary. We leave it to the people of our state if Mr. Allen's comments of November 1 evidence that kind of study.

Furthermore, another highly-placed Oregon political figure, Ervin L. Peterson of North Bend, who serves as Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, has told the press that he is unalterably opposed to the Oregon Dunes Seashore Park, although he does support an administration bill for three seacoast parks elsewhere in the nation.

Believe Park Deserved. We are working hard and long for this seashore park because we believe Oregon's scenic assets deserve it. But many other states are seeking parks for their shorelines of lesser beauty, and in those states there are not such highly-placed public officials so hostile to national park development. It is not unreasonable for Congress to create national parks in areas congenial to such projects.

The present situation is all the more distressing because leaders of the National Park Service have declared that Oregon's magnificent shoreline qualifies admirably for a great seacoast park. Would that many Oregonians had this loyalty to their own state! We are discouraged but we agree with ex-Governor Charles A. Sprague, one of Oregon's greatest editors, who has written that, if Oregon does not get this park, the people will know exactly who killed Cock Robin.

Mrs. Brookwell Attends Child Guidance Meeting

Mrs. Virginia Brookwell, of Southern Oregon Child Guidance Clinic attended the annual Oregon child guidance meeting in Portland last week.

Theme for the annual meeting of clinic social workers, psychologists and psychiatrists was "delineation of differentiation of the clinician and consultant role in mental health programs in Oregon."

Among features of the two-day conference was a report by a committee appointed to study the needs of child care.

Dr. Norman Janzer, psychologist, gave the viewpoint of a psychologist on consultation furnished such protective agencies as the various county juvenile departments.

Joseph Thymann, casework supervisor for the Portland juvenile court spoke on what is expected from consultation by child guidance clinics.

Thursday, all clinic social workers held a quarterly meeting to discuss problems they experienced in work. A major discussion topic was problems encountered while working with low income families. The group discussed problems in working with socially and economically deprived patients.

The group discussed the role of the social worker and how that role is best carried out.

While in Portland, Mrs. Brookwell and other clinic social workers consulted with Mrs. Minnie Waterman, psychiatric casework consultant, state board of health.

Medford Man Pleads Guilty in Court

William Glomb, 341 Black Oak dr., Medford, pleaded guilty in district court Monday to charges of making a false statement in writing.

Imposition of sentence was suspended for six months and Glomb was placed on probation providing he pay court costs and commit no further unlawful acts.

Glomb was charged with issuing a bad check for $57 in Phoenix June 12, according to district court records.

Police Have Little Trouble Finding Coat

Danbury, Conn.—Mrs. Shirley Glass reported to police that her $2,600 mink coat was stolen.

Detective Harley Morrison investigated and found no sign of forcible entry at her home, but, looking under a bed, he saw her pet cocker spaniel curled up on the coat.
