Some Cranberry Growers Blamed For Poor Practice

Last year, FDA assumed that the warnings of 1957, plus withholding contaminated berries from the market, would prevent further misuse of the weed killer in bogs. FDA, an agency under Fleming's department, and the cranberry trade association, Ocean Spray Cranberries, Inc., therefore did little or no checking on last year's crop. When toxicity studies, completed last May, revealed that this weed killer was a cancer-producing agent, FDA resumed checking grower practices and perfecting in analytical method for detecting residues of the chemical in the berries.

Shipments Contaminated

FDA agents then discovered:
1. Two out of seven shipments from the Pacific Northwest were contaminated. These two were the shipments from Oregon to California, and from Washington into Oregon.

2. Preliminary results of tests on 10 other lots, not yet shipped, indicate contamination.

3. "Evidence that some growers have again failed to follow good agricultural practice in use of the weed killer indicate that we are likely to find additional contaminated lots in the 1959 crop," Fleming said.

"In view of the findings on the 1959 Northwestern crop, and the previous history of the 1957 crop, we believe it reasonable to assume that the 1958 crop may also be contaminated," the secretary declared.

Discontinues Sales

On this basis, FDA urged that all sales be discontinued at once. FDA presumes that most of what is now on the market in retail stores is from the 1958 crop. Most of the 1959 crop is still in the distribution pipeline. Either in the hands of growers, processors, or wholesalers, a spokesman said. FDA is urging upon all of these a ban upon further commercial transfers of cranberries until the industry has submitted a workable plan to separate the good from the contaminated berries.

No contamination has been found in berries this year from other growing areas. The 3 million pounds of berries now buried in the Northwest amounted to a third of the 12,500,000 pound Northwest crop for 1957.

The department of agriculture said Monday its crop estimates showed that Oregon this year would have a cranberry crop amounting to 4.4 million pounds and Washington would produce 8.4 million pounds, giving the Northwest about 10 per cent of the national production for 1959.

FDA, Fleming noted, has refused to set any tolerance, or safe minimum, for any amount of chemical in foods if it produces cancer when fed to test animals.

FDA is investigating possible contamination of other crops by this weed killer. Fleming urged growers not to use this chemical in a way that would leave any residue in or on the produce.

Charge of 'Political Payoff' in Ending Steel Strike Hit by Hagerty

Washington—UPI—The White House today denounced as "demagoguery" a labor leader's charge that President Eisenhower's intervention in the steel strike was a "political payoff."

Presidential News Secretary James C. Hagerty made the statement in commenting on a speech Monday by Emil Mazey, secretary treasurer of the United Automobile Workers.

SOUND FAILURE

Hamilton Air Force, Calif.—UPI—The Air Force, which has jarred the San Francisco Bay area on several occasions with sonic booms, scheduled one Monday for a speed and space symposium. Two F-104s raced across the sky at sonic speeds — and nothing happened.

Mazey told the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Department conference that use of a Taft-Hartley injunction to stop the steel strike was a "political payoff" by Eisenhower to campaign contributors.

"Such demagoguery leveled against President Eisenhower is, of course, not really worthy of comment," Hagerty told newsmen.

"I am sure the American people realize that the President acted only when it was clear that the welfare of the United States dictated positive action under the law. Such action was upheld by the courts of our land."

Others Hit Action
Other speakers at Monday's labor meeting also lashed out at the President's action. And at the end of the speechmaking, delegates shouted unanimous approval of a resolution which accused the President of "strikebreaking."

As the meeting continued today, the IUD was considering new formulas for settling strikes to replace the Taft-Hartley injunctive process.

Hagerty was reminded that other labor leaders also criticized the President at the labor conference Monday and was asked if his comment applied to all of the criticism.

"Sure," he answered.
Arthur J. Goldberg, general counsel for the Steelworkers Union, is asking the AFL-CIO to present in Congress his own plan for ending critical walkouts. He made that suggestion at today's final IUD session.

Mazey said in his speech

Monday that the President sent the 500,000 steelworkers back to work after 116 days of the strike in order to fulfill political obligations to the industry.

Food Writers Tell Substitutes For Cranberries

New York—UPI—The nation's food writers wailed briefly at the thought there might not be a cranberry for every Thanksgiving turkey, and then perked up. There are substitutes for the tart and brilliant traditional turkey relish.

"Swedish lingonberries would be wonderful," said Ann Seranne, former editor of Gourmet Magazine, "if you can get them."

"A lot of people love to have sauerkraut with turkey," said Katharin Pinkerton, author of "Cooking Aloft."

Calls It Tragic
"But isn't it tragic. My family loves cranberry—whole berry jelly."

"Spiced peaches, plums, nectarines, any spiced or pickled fruit," suggested Claude C. Philippe, long of the Waldorf, now executive consultant to the Zeckendorf Hotels Corp.

Most had second thoughts as well.

"I should think sour cherries would make a wonderful relish, and good color, too," said Miss Seranne. "It might be fun to candy them. Cook very slowly in syrup for a couple of hours."

"Or poach apple slices in syrup with vanilla. You could add some cinnamon candy for color."

Currents 'Best of All'
Mrs. Pinkerton liked lingonberries, too, or pineapple.

"People who like that raw cranberry relish put through the grinder could substitute pineapple and add mandarin oranges and a little ginger," she suggested.

"Out in Canada and Minnesota there's a wild high-bush cranberry that's perfectly magnificent," Mrs. Pinkerton said. "I don't know if there are any on the market, but I'd rather have that than anything."

"Or what about wild gooseberry jam? That has a tang. Or currants. Maybe that's the best of all. I think maybe I'd just go buy the very best currant jelly I could buy and let it go at that."

Two Appear in District Court

James Tolley, 18, address unlisted, and Jack Marion Day, 17, of 417 King st., were bound over to the grand jury in district court yesterday on charges of burglary not in a dwelling.

The two young men waived a preliminary hearing, waived the privilege of having an attorney and are being held in the county jail on $1,500 bail. They are charged with breaking into and entering Empire Beverage company at 14 West Fourth st. on Nov. 2. The court asked that Tolley's correct name be shown on the records rather than the name DeWeerd, which the youth had been using.
