

Back Stairs: Trip Details Staggering

By MERRIMAN SMITH

UPI White House Reporter

Washington (UPI)—Back stairs at the White House: The United States Secret Service, the Air Force and the White House staff are burning the midnight kilowatts on plans for president Eisenhower's December trip to Italy, Turkey, India and other points.

The details are staggering in number. Here's a sample: Press Secretary James C. Hagerty and Col. William Draper, the president's pilot and Air Force aide, must cover the entire route in advance, leaving this week. Among other things, they'll have to suggest as diplomatically as possible to local authorities that news photographers be discouraged from using—and discarding—conventional flashbulbs in airport areas near the president's jet transport plane.

The powerful jet engines suck up any sort of debris along a runway or apron and a dose of undigested flashbulbs can cause engine trouble.

The president's transport also is equipped with the latest radar equipment. This is another reason why the White House would prefer that news photographers not come near the aircraft bearing flashbulbs.

Radar beams can cause the bulbs to go off in a photographer's pocket. There have been cases at some military fields where news photographers suffered painful burns from their own bulbs.

The White House news photographers don't use flashbulbs. They switched to the ultramodern strobe lights a long time ago.

No Limit on Baggage

John Mooney, the president's valet, is another man with problems. Naturally there is no limit on the amount of baggage the president can take along. But the fast-moving nature of the 20,000-mile trip and the highly varied nature of the climate along the way still add up to a clothing problem.

Mooney's plans are top secret, but lesser ranking members of the Eisenhower staff, male division, have been shopping recently for thermal underwear. This will enable them, they theorize, to brave the winter weather of Paris and Rome in outer garments sufficiently light in weight for street wear in New Delhi and Karachi.

Christmas Tree Thieves Targets

Goldendale, Wash. — (UPI)—Christmas tree thieves will be the target of an all-out campaign in Klickitat county this year. An ordinance has been passed by the county commissioners giving law enforcement officers authority to arrest anyone found in unlawful possession of the trees.

The ordinance makes it unlawful to cut, dig, break, pick or remove Christmas trees or other holiday greenery without consent of the owner or lessee. Another section makes it illegal to transport the items without owner consent.

Survey Shows Car Owner's Grades Lower

Wells, Nev. — (UPI)—Lance Agee, a reporter for the Wells High School student magazine, made a survey at the school and came up with the following statistics:

—Not one straight "A" student at Wells High owns a car.

—Only five per cent of the "B" students do.

—About 45 per cent of the "C" students do.

—And 71 per cent of the "D" students do.

Agee pointed out that he was neither a car owner nor an "A" student.
