Ike Authorizes Advisory Group On Latin America

Secretary of State Will Be Chairman

Augusta, Ga. — (UPI) — President Eisenhower acted Saturday to combat the recent flare-up of anti-Americanism in Latin America.
The chief executive authorized creation of a special advisory committee to help Secretary of State Christian A. Herter with "current and long-range problems in our relations with Latin America."
Membership of the group will include the President's brother, Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, and Walter J. Donnelly, former ambassador to Venezuela and now an official of the U.S. Steel Corp. in South America.
Herter to Be Chairman
Announcement of the new committee came at a time when Eisenhower was otherwise preoccupied with details of his December trip to Europe, Asia and the Middle East.
Herter will serve as chairman of the group to be known as "The National Advisory Committee on Inter-American Affairs." The advisers will meet in Washington from time to time "to be briefed on and to study various aspects of our Latin American relations."

In authorizing the establishment of the committee, the President expressed his conviction that it would perform a very helpful function both in terms of developing useful ideas with respect to our inter-American relations and in promoting wider understanding of these relations among the peoples of this country," the White House said.

Other Members
In addition to Doctor Eisenhower and Donnelly, the advisory group included G. Kenneth Holland, Bronxville, N.Y., president of the Institute of International Education; Charles A. Meyer of Chicago, vice president of Latin American Operations, Sears, Roebuck and Co.; Dr. Diana G. Munro, director, Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, Princeton University; and O. A. Knight, Denver, president of the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union and vice president of the AFL-CIO.

Irish Envoy's Son May Be Sent Home

Washington — (UPI) — An Irish diplomat's son and that the youth very likely will be sent home.
At the same time, the lawyer for the woman's family said the ambassador, John J. Hearne, notified him that he and his son, David, planned to attend the victim's funeral services today.

Immunity Claimed
The woman, Mrs. Jossie Hamlin, a maid, was struck and killed by David's car this week. The youth was released when he claimed diplomatic immunity and the case was closed.

An Irish diplomat, who asked that his name be withheld, said in New York he is "sure an indemnity will be paid."

He also said he thought it "very likely" that David would be sent back to Ireland soon.

William S. Thompson, the attorney for the family, said Hearne contacted him and asked if the family would be hostile if the ambassador and the son attended the funeral service.

Asked if Hearne had offered any payment, the attorney said that none was mentioned.

Given 'Brushoff'
Before Hearne contacted him, Thompson said he had been given the brushoff every time he tried to telephone the ambassador. The lawyer who said he was seeking some "angle" to break young Hearne's diplomatic immunity, had complained that the envoy "has not even offered to pay the funeral expenses" or make any contact with Mrs. Hamlin's family.

"Even when you run a dog down in the road, you call the owner," he declared. "It seems like he would call the family at least to offer sympathy."

British Coast Lashed by Gale
London — (UPI) — One of the worst gales of the century lashed the British coast Saturday.

At least four persons were drowned as the wind reached gusts of 100 miles an hour.

One veteran skipper called it the worst storm in his 38 years at sea.

Telephone lines snapped and trees toppled inland, but most of the fury of the storm was at sea. Steering rudders on small vessels snapped and emergency calls piled up at coastal rescue stations.

Capt. Francis Trout of the 2,000-ton steamer Falaise reported the waves were "fantastic" in the English channel.

"We seemed to drop into holes in the sea," he said.

Flood Threats, Stock Starvation Plague Montana

More Snow, Cold Said To Be on Way

Helena, Mont. — (UPI) — Montana battled the threats of floodwaters and livestock starvation Saturday on the eve of a new blizzard and sub-zero cold wave.
The snow-swept state appeared to be winning both fights.

A flood on the Missouri river at Townsend diminished, although stranded cattle were frozen knee-deep on an island. Ranchers had managed to get food to most of the thousands of sheep and cattle robbed by the snows of their forage on the upper mountain ranges.

More Snow Expected
But more troubles were on their way for Montana, which endured record snows 21.5 inches deep and record cold as low as 46 below zero earlier in the week.

Weather forecasters said a new blizzard and 20-below cold would move in tomorrow. The storm was not expected to be as serious as its predecessor — Montana's worst in history — but forecasters said the newcomer promised "a blizzard condition."

Claims 39 Lives
The same storm and cold wave which froze Montana had claimed at least 39 lives across the nation, most of them in car crashes on icy roads. There were eight dead in both Illinois and Michigan, seven in both Iowa and Montana, four in both Indiana and Wisconsin, and one in Kansas.

R. C. Mix Nabbed On Highway 99 Near Phoenix
Robert Carr Mix, 43, of 215 C St., Phoenix, was captured Friday night on the South Pacific highway just south of Phoenix, then recaptured as he attempted to escape from a sheriff's car.

He was charged with assault with a deadly weapon, according to a warrant issued Thursday from district court.

Sheriff Joe Walsh and Sgt. Dean Deberry spotted a green Ford with California license plates on the highway near Phoenix Friday night. Pulling closer for a check, they recognized Mix as the driver.

"He was carrying a .22 caliber rifle on his lap and tried to use it," a sheriff's deputy said. "The two men grappled with him after pulling the rifle away. They pinned Mix's arms behind him and handcuffed him."

After Mix was handcuffed and in the patrol car he jumped out of the car. The sheriff and his deputy gave chase, soon overtook him and secured him in the car.

Mix was being sought following a dispute Wednesday morning with his wife, Mrs. Aletha Maxine Mix, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Mix, 2542 Walden pl., according to police.

Police were told that Mix, armed with a revolver, shot through the door of a room at the Dan Mix residence, in which Aletha Mix had locked herself.

Cranberries From Wisconsin Found Contaminated

Nixon Sees No Reason for Hysteria

Washington — (UPI) — The government disclosed Saturday that contamination has been found in cranberries shipped from Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., where Vice President Richard M. Nixon ate cranberry sauce Thursday night.

But the firm which supplied the cranberries for Nixon said there was "no chance whatsoever" that they were contaminated. A spokesman for the company said the berries on which Nixon dined had not been exposed to contaminating weed-killer.

Nixon Not Concerned
Nixon said earlier that he was "not concerned about the cranberries I ate." He added that he saw no reason for "hysteria" on the part of consumers.

The new report of contaminated berries was issued by Arthur S. Fleming, secretary of health, education and welfare. He said traces of a weed killer, purported to cause cancer in laboratory rats, were found in a 39,120-pound lot of berries shipped from Wisconsin Rapids to a Chicago warehouse.

Most Found Safe
It was the first new report on contamination since Fleming announced Monday that berries from Washington and Oregon contained the weed killer. However, Fleming said 101 of 104 lots of cranberries tested had proved safe.

The cabinet official said the food and drug administration was asking the justice department to seize the 652 bags of Wisconsin cranberries which are now in a Chicago warehouse.

Allegany Corp. Proxy Fight Looms
New York — (UPI) — The stage apparently has been set for a proxy fight in Allegany Corp., a big holding company.

Abraham M. Sona ben d, Boston financier, Friday started what could possibly be the biggest financial clash of the year with an accusation of "bad faith" against Allan P. Kirby, Allegany chairman and president.

Sona ben d and about seven associates recently acquired more than 700,000 shares of Allegany common stock, or close to 15 per cent of the total share outstanding.

Kirby, partner of the late Robert R. Young, reportedly owns 516,500 Allegany shares. However, Kirby, who has warrants to purchase 226,440 shares of Allegany common. A deciding factor in this possible proxy fight could be the 100,000 Allegany common shares held by the widow of the late Robert R. Young.

Unik III Contact Lost by Russia
Moscow — (UPI) — Russia has lost contact with Unik III, possibly because a meteor struck the moon photography rocket in space, it was announced Saturday night.

Leonid Sedov, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, reported radio signals from the 614-pound payload launched Oct. 4 had ceased. He did not say when they stopped.

Writing in the Communist party newspaper Pravda, Sedov said loss of contact meant the end of continued valuable reports from the space vehicle jammed with instruments as well as the cameras that photographed the unseen side of the moon, Oct. 6.

Washington — (UPI) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has announced it will kick off International Rocket Week Monday with another spectacular sodium vapor experiment — weather permitting.

Rockefeller Found Impressive Performer Before Questioners

By ERIC W. ALLEN JR.

Mail Tribune Managing Editor

Eugene — At this stage in his career, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller is a more impressive political performer in front of a sharply questioning audience of newsmen than he is in making a prepared address before an audience of nearly 6,000.

As a potential candidate for the Republican nomination for the Presidency of the United States, Rockefeller is under a handicap. He declares frankly that the time has not yet come for him to make up his mind whether or not to seek the office. In the interim, to questions on national policies — foreign affairs, farm problems, land use, and so on — he either speaks generally, ducks gracefully, or discusses them in relation to the problems of New York state.

Looks Governor Than Years
The governor, a husky man who wears his millions and his slightly outdated clothes calmly and with assurance, looks younger than his 51 years. His speech is not as fluent, nor as brilliant, as those accomplished orators, Senators John Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey, other recent political pulse-feelers in Oregon.

But he speaks with apparent sincerity, honesty and forthrightness. He is also exceedingly careful not to fall into a verbal trap. At least twice during Saturday's press and radio-TV conferences, he corrected the wording of reporters who quoted him as a preface to asking another question or an elaboration.

His prepared address contained little of political significance, with two exceptions. The first was his laudatory mention of Gov. Mark Hatfield as an example of the best kind of person to be in politics; the second was his tacit acknowledgement that all is not well in America, that much needs to be done.

The latter, by interpretation, could be taken as unspoken but implied criticism of the Eisenhower administration, particularly in the context of a "non-political" tour of the three western states.

Uplifting Talk
Other than these, his speech was the sort of gracious and uplifting talk which one might expect from a skilled commencement speaker at a high school exercise — a plea for honesty, integrity and participation in politics by young people, and the value of politics and good politicians to this country's welfare.

At the two preceding news conferences, however, he was calm, assured — almost cool — in his studied response to a variety of questions.

At one point he drew a chuckle when a TV questioner likened political conventions to "rigged TV shows," and Rockefeller grinned and said, "I can understand your sensitivity." He added, more seriously, there is no comparison, for the "shows" and demonstrations put on at the conventions are a real and integral part of the machinery of the two-party system as worked out in its process of selecting its candidates.

In terms which were generally non-specific, Governor Rockefeller advocated federal aid for school construction when there is a "proven financial need," emphasized the need for more security for older people, economically, in health services and other fields and by all levels of government; on the "eventual" need for more intimate contacts with Red China "if we are to find the kind of lasting peace with justice and freedom which we seek"; his pleasure at the warm reception he felt he had received in California, and on Oregon's unique primary election law, which he termed "ingenious."

Will Eat Cranberries
One reporter asked if he had eaten any cranberries recently. Rockefeller laughed and replied, "No — but I'm going to."

He declined to comment on national farm policies, saying he may have more to say later on that subject.

Queried about the possible unification of the armed forces, the governor indicated he generally favored this, pointed out that steps have been, and are being, taken in this direction, but said that immediate and complete unification now is "not realistic" because of morale factors in the three services.

Foreign aid, he said, is a "tool" of national policy, not an end in itself, and should be used to implement the nation's purposes and goals, to supplement and support other methods.

In advocating the resumption of nuclear bomb tests at once, he said they should be held in "no threat" of radioactive fallout ensuing. He declared this could lead to developments in the peaceful uses of atomic power, as well as in weaponry. And it would not deter working out an agreement on disarmament, Rockefeller said.

To the problems of growth and development in the western states, Rockefeller said he is "most sympathetic," and added that they are prevalent in the east, too, where many areas have "fallen behind" in developing their resources and their potentials.

Castro Comment Declined
He declined specific comment on the government of Fidel Castro in Cuba, on the grounds he had not been in Cuba since Castro took power. But he said that what he had read recently was disturbing, that he hopes the lack of stability, the unrest and the confusion can be eliminated, for the "wonderful people" of Cuba have much to offer in social and economic methods and attitudes.

At all three of his appearances, before newspapermen, the radio and television representatives, and during his formal talk, Rockefeller warmly praised Governor Hatfield, leaving the impression, at any rate, that he would be glad to have him on the same ticket — if and when it came to that.

Governor Said Kind of Man for Highest Office

Warm Reception Found in Oregon

Eugene — (UPI) — New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller received a warm welcome in Oregon today and declared the state's young Republican governor, Mark Hatfield, would make a "wonderful" vice presidential candidate.

Rockefeller, in the third day of his far west tour for support of a possible presidential bid in 1960, was accompanied virtually every step of the way by Hatfield. The 37-year-old Oregon governor has been mentioned as a possible running mate for Rockefeller if the latter decides to seek the GOP nomination.

Outstanding Leader
"He (Hatfield) is one of the outstanding political leaders in our country and I hope he goes on to the highest office," Rockefeller told a news conference.

Asked by reporters if he was thinking in terms of the Presidency, Rockefeller replied: "Ultimately Hatfield is the kind of man we want to see leading the country."

He said specifically that he thought Hatfield would be a "wonderful vice presidential candidate."

Rockefeller's reception in the key state of Oregon was warmer than the one he received in California.

No Controversy
He was met at the airport by Hatfield Friday night. This morning he held two news conferences, one for newspaper reporters and one for television and radio reporters. There was no controversy as there was in Los Angeles Thursday when TV — radio newsmen refused "separate-but-equal" news conferences.

Rockefeller said he would not be rushed into a decision on seeking the Republican presidential nomination.

"I will not make such an important decision as that until I am positively satisfied it is a right one," he said. "To rush into a decision as important to the country should not be made hastily."

He said earlier on his western tour that he would announce his decision after Jan. 1.

Surprised By Crowd
After the news conferences Rockefeller addressed an enthusiastic crowd at the University of Oregon estimated by police at more than 5,000. He seemed genuinely surprised at the large turnout of students and townspeople.

"This is certainly a very exciting experience for 10 o'clock on a Saturday morning," he said.
