

Education in Oregon Theme of PEA President

New developments in Oregon in the field of education were outlined by Mrs. Maxine (Paul R.) Smith, president of Oregon Education association, when she spoke for the November meeting of the College Women's Club of the Rogue River Valley. It was held Saturday at Girls Community club.

"Education in Oregon" was Mrs. Smith's topic and she began by saying that the assigned topic has almost no limits because of the interlocking nature of the local, district, state and national fields.

However, Oregon has done some things that are outstanding and that are new and different. The first is a publication, "A Conceptual Design for the Teaching Profession," a statement by the OEA policy committee. According to Mrs. Smith this has proved of so much value that it has been copied into the Congressional Record and has been added to the professional libraries of Northwestern university and Teachers college, Columbia university. This is a prospectus of things to be achieved in the next decade in Oregon.

It was written by a group of eminent citizens interested in the future of education but approved and published by the OEA.

Freedom to Teach
The first point made by the authors is that the teacher should have freedom to teach. The average teacher "performs a variety of activities, in a variety of settings, under a variety of arrangements." This does not include control over his own profession, which is considered the first right to be fought for.

Because the teacher is under constant pressure of outside demands and non-professional duties, he cannot attain pre-eminence in his profession. Any conceptual design for the educator must give priority to this dilemma that faces almost every teacher, almost every day, Mrs. Smith said.

There is no place in the teaching profession for an "either-or" attitude between depth of learning in any field of learning and the professional knowledge necessary to do good work. Both are fundamental to successful teaching. There is no plateau where a teacher may rest, for teaching requires continuous study, she added.

The national commission appraising teacher education is the organization that rates teacher training schools and according to this group, Southern Oregon college is on the approved list. Last year in Oregon, out of 1375 graduates from teacher training schools only 402 came from the approved list.

Revision Needed
One of the current projects of the OEA is the revision of the certification laws for teaching in Oregon. At the present time there are 15 types; the committee hopes to reduce it to 3.

According to Mrs. Smith, Oregon will probably receive $500,000 federal funds under the National Defense Act, a plan for improving classroom teaching by providing funds for the instruction of selected teachers in the fields of mathematics, science, foreign languages and guidance.

Among the very active committees is TEPS (teacher education and professional standards), which sponsors the Future Teachers of America clubs in high schools and the student OEA in colleges.

In conclusion, Mrs. Smith urged that churches, PTA and other groups interested in this field, write to the OEA, NEA or to many of the specialized committees for program material. All have pamphlets, films, and tapes that are free or free except for postage.

New York—Milliner Sally Victor, who says it's time she and her colleagues called a halt to the war with hairdressers whose creations are too pretty to be crushed by a hat, declared a truce in the form of a new line of "hatslets" that enhance a hairdo. This whimsical creation, consisting of a big taffeta bow, perky rose and a flattering face veil, is typical of the low-priced hats that are held to the head by tiny combs. —(UPI Telephoto)
