Christmas Card Spending Nearing Saturation Point

WOMAN'S VIEW UPI Women's Editor

New York—(UPI)—A custom which began in England 116 years ago today is a multi-million dollar business in the United States.

The custom of sending Christmas cards each year edges a little closer to the saturation point. The greeting card association, which represents the bulk of the manufacturers, said that this year, we will exchange 2,630, 000,000 cards, 130,000,000 more than last year. The cost will be $275 million, or about $13 million more than in 1958. Our postage bill will run an estimated $200 million.

Comparatively, five years ago we spent $217 million, on 2,054,000,000 cards, said Stephen Q. Shannon, the association's executive director. Shannon said the sending of greetings is an ancient Chinese custom; the oriental celebrated the New Year with messages of good will and cheer.

But the first known published Christmas card appeared in London in 1843, when John Calcutt Horsley, a painter and illustrator, created a card for Sir Henry Cole, first director of the Victoria and Albert Museum.

By 1860, the custom was well established in Britain. In 1875, the first line of Christmas cards appeared in the United States market, made by Louis Prang, a Boston lithographer.

His had all the frou-frou typical of the Victorian era, some were cards designed for wall decoration and equipped with heavy silk cords. Some were edged with inch-long silk fringe. Other folded cards dripped with tassels. Some even were encrusted with blown glass frosting.

But none carried the symbols typical of today's Christmas, mistletoe, Santa Claus, bells and candles. Prang used his favorite flower, the Killarney rose.

Today's cards are rarely so elaborate, but the designs are far more numerous, an estimated 40 thousand, or 25 percent feature a religious motif.

In the religious group the most popular designs is the Madonna, which accounts for 18 percent, followed by the Three Wise Men, the Holy Family, churches and manger scenes in that order.

In the non-religious group, the bold titles account for about 15 percent of all designs. These are cards which display a single word such as "Noel," or a boldly lettered message, "Merry Christmas," or "Season's Greetings."

Santa Claus accounts for 11 percent of the non-religious cards, followed by winter scenes, floral motifs, candles, animals and birds, in that order.
