Pomander Balls Are Colorful Homedecorations

Make pomander balls for Christmas. They have a delightful spicy aroma, are an attractive unusual decoration, and can be hung later in linen or clothes closets.

Here's how to make them: wrap firm and perfect oranges with narrow cotton tape to form four equal sections. Stick whole cloves evenly and closely enough to cover entire exposed surface. Sprinkle with powderedorris root (available at drugstores).

Let stand for several days, then shake off surplus powder, replace the cotton tape with red ribbon, allowing length of ribbon to the several pomander balls in a cluster. Top with spray of greens and big red bow. Now add tiny bows of red ribbon for another pretty touch, and hang about the house or on your front door.

In the "olden days," whenever they were, "a pomander bag was carried on the person to guard against infection."

After removing the last load from a clothes dryer, leave the door ajar or run the dryer about five minutes.

Florists Outline Best Treatment For Cut Posies

New York - (UPI) - The rain from heaven contains no aspirin or salt, so why put them in the water with cut flowers. Neither prolongs their beauty, say a couple of professional florists - Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Grupp, who have had a shop across the street from the Metropolitan Opera house for 28 years.

Mrs. Grupp said a big chunk of their business comes from opera fans around the country, who wire floral pieces to their favorite singers. And through the doors of their small shop also pass many operatic greats, not only to buy for their homes or for friends, but also to ask how to preserve the life of a cut flower.

The Grupp's advice: Unpack flowers the minute they arrive, but don't plunge them into a vase of cold water. Instead, the warmest welcome is a rest in a dark room and a warm drink (water around 110 degrees F.) in a bucket. This is known as "hardening," making blooms fresh, crisp and dewy.

Before putting the flowers in a vase, stems should be re-opened to allow them to drink freely. Make a slanting cut across the bottoms of the stems with a sharp knife. Cutting with scissors pinches and damages.

Flowers require fresh water and don't thrive in stagnant. So change water daily and scrub containers clean. Also recut stem daily with a sharp knife. However, if you use the special cut-flower foods that prolong the life of blooms and arrest bacterial action in the water, you don't have to bother with these procedures. Just add more water, as necessary.

Place arrangements away from heat or drafts. If you can, move the vase to a cool place overnight because this gives flowers a lift for the next day.

Milk Drinking Habits
New York - (UPI) - Competition from other beverages, primarily coffee, was found to be the chief deterrent to milk drinking among 40 per cent of men and women surveyed recently.

The Pennsylvania Experiment Station of the U.S. Department of Agriculture also reported that the survey showed women are less likely than men to drink and like milk.

Washer Revolts Explained by OSC Specialist

Corvallis - Ever had your washer stop dead when trying to get out a big family wash? Chances are something's amiss with its operation which can be traced to the way you've handled the machine, suggests Bernice Strawn, Oregon State college home management and equipment specialist.

These appliances have a right to revolt when they are abused, she adds. Most common cause of trouble is overloading, which is hard on the motor. If clothes don't roll over freely in the wash water, you're putting in too many.

Another source of trouble is the use of the wrong amount or type of detergent, especially in front opening or tumble action washers. In these machines a sudsing detergent can smother washing action and even stop the machine if too much is used. Low sudsing detergents are recommended for best results in this type of washer. High sudsing detergents are satisfactory in top opening washers.

Use Directions

Directions on detergent packages tell how much of the product to use in different types of washers. Also, check the washer instruction book for more tips which can help prevent service calls.

Homemakers can save time on service calls by getting ready before help is needed. Know who your service man is and keep his phone number handy, recommends the specialist. Save confusion too, by rounding up the facts and tell the person on the other end of the line the model number of the appliance, date purchased and a brief description of the trouble. Sometimes they can spot the trouble on the phone and save you the expense of the service call.

You'll be happier in the long run if when you buy an appliance you ask about the warranty. Usually it covers replacement of any defective part within a year but not always does it include payment for labor to replace the part. If trouble occurs within this time limit, you'll know how much service you can expect without charge.

Consumers should be prepared to expect some service will be necessary for any mechanical device. Miss Strawn points out. The more automatic it is, the greater chance it will require service.

Guestmanship
New York - (UPI) - Rate high in guestmanship by heralding your visit with a gift for the hostess. Wire flowers, arranging delivery a few hours in advance of your visit. Take along a box of lollipops for the children to help break the ice with them.

Natural Eye Beauty
Foods rich in vitamin A contribute to eye beauty by keeping the eyes healthy. Nutritionists recommend such vitamin A-rich foods as carrots, spinach, kale, escarole, broccoli and lettuce. Other foods rich in vitamin A are apricots, peaches, beef and calf's liver.

Push-Button Shopping Seen As Next Electronic Wonder

By GAY PAULEY UPI Women's Editor

New York - (UPI) - From now until they finish "Auld Lang Syne," we can brace for post-mortems on the 1950s and for previews of the 1960s.

We'll be told how frantic, fabulous and fun-filled the decade was. We'll hear forecasts of even more frantic, fabulous and fun-filled years ahead.

One man, an industrial designer, already is getting his ticks in. And if life on the home front shapes up as he sees it, we're about to share in the greatest labor-saver of all. We'll be able to eliminate many of the usual shopping expeditions and just sit home and spend money by push-button.

Saul Nesbitt, a designer for 15 years, said his is no pipe dream; that electronics will do the work for us, especially in the food field.

Nesbitt sketched a shoppers' paradise in a talk before the Merchandising Exploration club, a group of professional men who meet regularly to discuss packaging, advertising and selling potentials.

He enlarged on the subject in an interview. All the gadgets necessary already are developed, he said. All that is needed is for someone to "compile" them.

Here is how Nesbitt sees "operation market basket" before the next decade ends. Mrs. Housewife will sit before a video-phone which operates on her regular telephone line, dial the number of her favorite supermarket which has developed into vast, dispensing warehouse, and make her selections from the images of foods appearing with their prices on her video-phone screen.

At the warehouse, her voice - as she spells out her shopping list - will be tape-recorded and her order will be classified according to items and designated the assembling and routing, via electronic "brains."

From the assembly area, the order will move along a conveyor belt to the truck servicing her residential area. She can use either a charge account or pay on delivery.

Plans for holiday festivities were discussed, including the annual chapter party which was set for December 17. Mrs. William Prentiss, Xi Mu chapter president, submitted her resignation, and will move to Portland soon. Mrs. Cecil Davis, vice president, will assume the duties of president.
