Little People in Wall Street See Yule Season as Good One

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor
New York - (UPI) - As the little people in Wall Street view the situation, this ought to be a good Christmas. There will be bonuses in quantity—and if they are based as is usual on the volume of trading the take ought to set a new high for several decades.

Trading in stocks right now is the best since 1930 and if the current rate continues the year 1959 will be the best in market volume since 1929. Banks also have had a good year with money in demand at high rates—they should be good bonus payers, according to those who are on the receiving end.

Many corporations also are generous bonus payers when profits are large. This year because of the steel strike there may be a contraction from the corporate level. Anyhow, taken altogether it should be a happy Christmas for thousands of workers in Wall st. and Main st.

The fifth grade Chorus has been rehearsing for its part of the PTA program Friday, Dec. 11, at 2:30 p.m. At present the membership is 85 students. Officers are Peter Sage, president; Patty Clark, vice president; and Dusty Lewis, secretary. Mrs. Marian Montgomery is director of the chorus.

Crater High School
By LaVonne LaFever
Beginning Dec. 1 and lasting until Dec. 10, Crater is having class competition. It is an annual event known as "Bundle Days."
Supported since its inception by educators, public school administrators and school children, the Save the Children Federation Bundle Day donated clothing program is a program of children helping children.

Each year, thousands of children are able to attend school because of shoes and clothing provided through these collections. Donated clothing is shipped to isolated regions of the southern mountain states, where it is distributed free of charge by responsible authorities or is sold at small cost to low-income families who do not wish to accept free clothing. From the inception of its program, SFC donated clothing has been available for free distribution to victims of disaster at home and overseas.

In the United States, local welfare officials, school administrators and representatives of community organizations in disaster-stricken areas on request receive prompt SFC clothing allocations to help fill emergency needs, especially the needs of children.

The Drama club met during activity period Wednesday in Room 27 to plan a short program to be used at the PTA meeting this month. A short playlet entitled "Santa's Substitute" by Esther Hildebrand was chosen.

Crater's annual football banquet was held Tuesday, Dec. 1. Trophies were awarded for most valuable player, Gary Johnson; sportsmanship, Jim Eldred; down field blocking, Glen Cote; most valuable lineman, Glen Cote; first team all conference, Larry Ryerson; second team all conference, Gary Johnson.

Pupils of the school have been encouraged with new books received so far this year. We have more than 5,000 books in the library and circulation keeps the librarians, Mrs. Hazel Mekvold and her assistant librarians busy. The student body, teachers and visitors remark about the interesting and pleasant surroundings of the library with its green plants and displays.

All senior girls were required to take the Betty Crocker test Tuesday morning. The purpose of the test was to choose the American Homemaker of Tomorrow. It is a scholarship program open to all senior girls. The results, which have not as yet been determined, will help to identify some of their weaknesses in homemaking skill and knowledge.

Save the Children Federation "Bundle Day" is creating excitement and pupils of each room are trying to get their sacks filled with clothes, shoes, blankets and sheets for the American Southern Appalachian mountains. Ronald Pope's room has the largest amount to date. They have over three sacks.

Maurice Zam performed for the students and faculty of Crater High Tuesday. Zam is a pianist. He has traveled to various parts of the world entertaining people.
