Eisenhower to Meet President Of Tunisia on Warship at Sea

By United Press International

President Eisenhower, like many travelers before him over the past 400 years, is steering clear of Tunisia on his Mediterranean tour. For travelers of old, the reason for skipping Tunisia was the Barbary pirates. For Eisenhower it's lack of time.

He will meet Tunisia's No. 1 man in a warship on the sea. Tunisia pirates once dominated. Like those pirates, President Habib Bourguiba knows exactly what he wants and to deal with the risks.

Bourguiba, 53, was educated by the French, outlawed by the French, imprisoned by the French, elected when Tunisians threw out the French. What he wants is Tunisian prosperity, dignity, authority, complete independence.

Nation of Farms

So far, he has only a thin slice of all this. Independence in it; its first real king, Roger I of Sicily, was tossed out by a caliph in 1160.

East-West Barrier

Tunisia has been an international pingpong ball for a thousand years. Italy's Andrea Doria once led a fleet for Spain's Charles V against the Turks who ruled it. France took it over in 1862 to keep Italy out, and in return for giving Britain a free hand in Cyprus.

Halfway between Gibraltar and Suez, Tunisia forms the barrier between East and West in the Mediterranean. Its personality is suitably split: Arab is the official tongue but French "is not considered a foreign language." It tossed out French troops last year but had to let them keep the huge naval and air base at Bizerte.

Arab in the cities, Berber in the mountains; piratical by history (when the Deys and Beys of Tunis unleashed their Barbary Coast pirates to terrorize the Mediterranean) and earnest and ambitious for the future. That's Tunisia, and President Eisenhower will hear but not see — this time.

In the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

From New York:

Two networks say their technicians in New York "dubbed in" some of the crowd noises heard in television coverage of President Eisenhower's recent trip to Europe. The American Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System acknowledge that in a few instances recorded crowd noises were used where the real sounds were lacking or failed to fit in with other film. The National Broadcasting Co. says it used only the sound which actually accompanied the President during his travels.

An ABC spokesman explains: "When Mr. Eisenhower was traveling into Bonn (in West Germany) from the airport by car, we had only a man with a hand-held camera riding in a truck to cover him, where before he had natural sounds of the crowd. You obviously can't suddenly go into dead silence. So you use a little crowd noise or perhaps a little music."

LET'S put it this way:
A show is a SHOW.
A news event is a news event.
They are quite different. The purpose of a show is to entertain. The purpose of a news broadcast, whether TV or radio, is to INFORM. So it is reasonable that the techniques of the broadcasters, whether radio or TV, should vary according to what they are broadcasting.

FOR example:
An important element of President Eisenhower's visit to Europe was HOW HE WAS RECEIVED. If he was received by the crowds with wild enthusiasm, it was one thing. If the crowds listened to him in silence—if, to use the patois of the reviewers at a show that fails to catch on, they "sat on their hands"—it was something quite different.

That is to say:
The spontaneous and obviously genuine enthusiasm with which the crowds in Europe greeted President Eisenhower was a vitally important part of the story. If, through lack of proper equipment or failure of the equipment being used, the broadcaster had failed to include the sound of the cheering and his broadcast had conveyed the impression that our President was being received in silence, it would have amounted to DISTORTION of the news.

If, on the other hand, there had been NO cheering and the broadcaster had "dubbed it in" just to make a better show, he would have been equally guilty of distortion.

ANOTHER example:
A Suppose a candidate for an important office—say the Presidency of the U.S.—is making a speech. Suppose he is received by the audience with obvious enthusiasm. Suppose in the middle of his speech, just as he has made an important statement on a highly controversial issue, the sound truck or the transmitter broke down, leading the hearer to believe that his statement was received in stony silence.

In that event, the broadcaster would be justified in "dubbing in" canned applause. In fact, he would be subject to criticism if he didn't, for he

APPLEGATE VALLEY Art Exhibit Scheduled

By MAUDE ZIEGLER

Applegate Valley — An art exhibit is scheduled for this Sunday at the Wanagan service station and art shop at lower Applegate.

About 30 paintings by Mrs. Mason Anderson, who, with her husband, is co-owner of the shop, and Miss Janet Jordan, entertainer at the Medford hotel, will be on display. The exhibit at Wanagan — an Indian word meaning "meeting place"—will be open throughout the day and the public is invited.

A meeting of 4-H leaders of the Ruch area will be held at the school at 8 p.m. Dec. 13, to discuss the local 4-H program for the coming year. A community coordinator will be selected.

Lower Applegate Extension unit will hold its open meeting and Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Lester Rich Dec. 15.

The Applegate Valley Garden club will meet at the home of Mrs. Edna Sawyer at 1:30 p.m. Dec. 16. There will be a plant sale with proceeds going to send a delegate to 4-H summer school at Corvallis.

The Little Applegate sewing club will hold its Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Lewis Buckley Dec. 17.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Scovell, residents of Upper Applegate for the past 10 years, have sold their home here and will leave Dec. 12 for Santa Monica, Calif. Until they can purchase property there, Mr. and Mrs. Scovell will reside with their son, Hugh Scovell Jr., of Santa Monica.

The couple sold their home here to Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lampkin of Culver City, Calif. Mr. and Mrs. Lampkin were associated with MGM motion picture studios in Hollywood. Mrs. Lampkin became a member of Upper Applegate Grange during a previous trip here.

John Ramsay will arrive later this month from Memphis, Tenn., to spend the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Ramsay. Ramsay is in the Navy, and has finished aviation electronics fundamentals school with top scholastic honors, according to word received from his commanding officer.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Byrne returned Dec. 3 from Modesto, Calif., where they attended a meeting of Oregon and California turkey growers for the Hart hatchery. They also attended a West coast turkey show at Turlock and visited relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Byrne traveled by truck and returned with a load of rice hulls, brought from Sacramento, which would be conveying a false impression. It all depends on the circumstances.

So let's be reasonable about these things.

4-H Club News

Little Chefs
The last meeting of the Little Chefs Cooking club was held Dec. 4, at Linda Pickell's home.

Linda and Suzie Elliott demonstrated uncooked chocolate fudge.

Those who had a fine for talking, paid; those who didn't pay, had their fine doubled. A business meeting was held. The group looked at last year's secretary book which received a first prize, which means a gold seal.

The meeting was adjourned and refreshments were served.

Reese Creek Renegades
Bob Scobie, assistant leader of the Reese Creek Renegades, gave the club members a test on sheep at the Nov. 23 meeting of the club. He also handed out a sheet containing the parts of a sheep.

New member of the group is Steven Marshall, who is taking beef as his project.

Janne Calloway, president, presided at the meeting. The next meeting will be held at the Mathiesen home. The evening closed with games and refreshments.

Kay Stephenson, Reporter.

Kaper Kids
The third meeting of the Kaper Kids Dairy Goat club was held Dec. 5 at Martha Humphreys'.

Julie Jahn, president, called the meeting to order. There were 10 members present. Gary Norris and Janet Glidden gave reports on the parts of a goat and how to trim a goat's feet. Mrs. Lindstrom, the club leader, passed pamphlets on showmanship.

The group decided to hold a Christmas party Dec. 29 at the Lindstrom home with gifts limited to a price of 50 cents. After the meeting, refreshments were served and games played.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

GENE FOWLER, master of the inflated expense account, once alleged that a story he had tracked down in Juneau, Alaska, had involved outlays totaling $1,200. When an unfeeling auditor demanded a breakdown of this amount, Fowler submitted this list: Ear muffs: $200; sled, $400; rental of dogs, $300; Eskimo driver, $100; hush money to driver when lead dog died, $198.50; wreath to lead dog's widow, $1.50. Total: $1,200. Please remit."

Myron Cohen tells about an ex-dress manufacturer who has made a new life for himself as a building contractor. "One problem in my new line we haven't got," he boasted. "There are no returns. Who'd send back a building?"

Poem for a junior promenade by Richard Armour:
With evening gown backless and filmy for fair,
There was much, in her words, that had merit:
She said, with a sigh, she had nothing to wear,
And darned if the girl didn't wear it!
