Watch Holiday Mealtime Says OSC Nutritionist

Corvallis – Offer youngsters "visions of dancing sugarplums" without shortchanging them on solid meals at regular hours in the holidays ahead, homemakers are advised by Mrs. Ruth Klippstein, Oregon State College extension nutritionist.

Often in the bustle of Yule preparations, food needs of the Santa Claus set go unattended, she says. Youngsters fill up on sweets, miss meals, get on irregular sleeping schedules, tempers shorten, and the family may miss full enjoyment of the season. Mrs. Klippstein offers these suggestions to keep the household in order.

Set a deadline for yourself. Place an alarm clock nearby when addressing Christmas cards or sewing. Let the alarm signal time to start a meal or get youngsters down for naps.

Plan hearty evening meals with enough leftovers for a tasty noon lunch. Slice leftover roasts into sandwiches and serve with favorite canned soups. Homemakers can also save hours of preparation and cleanup with aid of prepared foods, main dishes in new boilable packages, frozen fish sticks and ready-to-eat canned foods, the home economist continues.

Children can entertain themselves with a small amount of dough and a rolling pin and stay out from underfoot. However, keep the amount of bowl licking under control by cleaning more of the batter out of the bowl or make cookies and candy after youngsters are in bed for the night.

Offer the younger set nutritious snacks in exchange for excessive sweets. Make up a plate of small sandwiches, carrot sticks and slices of fruit to go with baking samples. They'll compete better with other goodies if made festive. Cut sandwiches into fancy shapes with cookie cutters. Curl carrots, and fringe sticks of celery. Dress up glasses of cold milk with a sprinkling of gay-colored sugar or a few drops of food coloring. For easy use prepare ahead of time, cover with waxed paper and store in the refrigerator.

New York (UPI) – Corn bread squares with shrimp-cheese topping make a filling meatless meal. Spread squares generously with chili sauce, sprinkle with grated cheese and top each with 2 cooked shrimp. Brush shrimp lightly with melted butter and place squares in broiler about 5 inches from heat source. Broil 2 to 3 minutes. Serve hot.
