The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a Judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Margaret J. — We should tell Elaine before it's too late.
Charles J. — She wouldn't even believe us now.

Margaret J. — A widowed friend of mine is about to marry a man to whom I introduced her some time ago, and I am greatly worried about the future of this relationship. The man is in his 50s and has never been married. He is highly successful in business. My husband and I thought a great deal of Henry and we did what we could to encourage the relationship with Elaine.

Since that time we have learned some shocking things about him. Another friend informed us that Henry lived the life of sexual deviate for many years. We learned that he had an affair with a woman and put her through torture. I feel we should tell Elaine now before it is too late, but my husband disagrees.

Charles J. — I feel that it is already too late for us to meddle. Elaine is head over heels in love with Henry and has made all her plans for the wedding and their married life. I agree that Elaine is too nice to be put through the mill in a marriage of this sort, but I am afraid of what this thing might do to her at this stage. She has been seeing Henry steadily for the past year and she keeps telling us that he is the finest, most wonderful man she ever met. I must admit that so far he has treated her royally and she has taken on a new bloom. The way things are now I doubt whether Elaine would even believe us if we told her the whole story.

The Council: This is a most uncomfortable business for the J's, but we think Charles is right in wanting to keep quiet at this stage. In the first place, if the J's told Elaine what they had heard they would be repeating malicious gossip. It could be true, but that doesn't remove the taint from a piece of information passed on to harm another's reputation. Secondly, the J's should be aware that a widow in her 50's is probably competent to make some adjustments of her own. The fact that she has known the man well for a year before making a decision indicates she is not a desperate or foolhardy person. Henry has made a good impression on the J's and on Elaine over an extended period. That says something in his favor.

Finally, from the scrap of information given them the J's are not competent to judge the overall situation. It is possible that Henry has made or is making a strenuous effort to break with his old life. He may have been under medical treatment for his emotional problems and now be ready to start a new life with an understanding woman. The J's should not assume that Elaine is completely in the dark about such matters. It seems more likely that a mature man and woman contemplating marriage would have discussed various intimate issues. Elaine and her fiancé may be prepared to face whatever problems they'll encounter. In any case, the J's should not consider themselves responsible for the marriage simply because they introduced the couple. Things could not possibly have gotten this far without a strong desire by both partners to create a relationship of some sort. (Copyright 1959, General Features Corp.)

McMinnville Trailer Operation Sold
McMinnville—UPI—Purchase of three house trailer manufacturing plants including Rex Mobile Homes operation here has been announced by Chance Vought Aircraft, Inc. The local plant employs 140 persons and produces an average of five trailers per day. The owner was Mid-States Corporation. The purchasing firm said no change was planned in the local operation although it may be expanded later.

MIXED UP MAILMEN
Atlanta—UPI—Mailmen had a special warning today to follow their own instructions to the public. The warning was issued after someone complained that he saw mailmen collecting mail from two separate boxes, one marked "out of town" and the other "local", dumping them into his sack and trudging off.
