

LOG SUPPLY - Lack of rain this fall has permitted logging to continue longer than ever before, with many "summer shows" still operating. As a result, most southern Oregon mills have been able to stockpile more logs than in past years, assuring ample winter's supply. The picture above shows part of the deck and pond at Timber Products, Medford, which represents some 30 million board feet of saw logs.

Lumber Firms Pile Sawlogs During Good Weather This Year

Lack of precipitation this fall caused many persons to become apprehensive about next summer's water supply, but local logging and lumber firms were "making hay," with several summer logging shows still in operation and winter storage decks still untouched.

Sawmill owners say that even though there may be a long wet spring, enough logs are on hand to assure steady operation.

At Elk Lumber company, where two 45-hour shifts are expected to run through the winter, they are currently running two 54-hour shifts, with two 9-hour shifts on Saturdays, to keep up with woods operations that ordinarily would have been closed by now, according to Vice President and General Manager George C. Flanagan.

He said that logging operations on summer shows have never been carried out this late in past years. Frozen ground at higher elevations has helped bring this about, in addition to the lack of rainfall.

According to Stewart Mc-

Queen, vice president of Kogap Lumber Industries, the firm usually starts using logs from their deck in November, but this year, the middle of December, they are still adding to their reserve supply. They now have the largest log inventory on record, McQueen said.

Elk Lumber company does not deck its logs, but instead bands them together in ponds, which are full to capacity now, Flanagan said.

At Timber Products company over 80 million board feet of sawlogs have been stockpiled for winter use, and although decks are full hauling is still going on with the logs going into the pond and directly to the mill.

When weather closes woods operations and hauling, then the stockpile will be used, according to Manager T. K. Oliver. The new 40-acre pond decking space around its perimeter provides much greater log storage area, which became necessary with the addition of a new gang mill at Timber Products last year.

Oliver said the firm has plenty of logs for the winter's operation in spite of increased production.

New Schedule for Playground Made

Central Point—A new schedule reducing the maximum amount of playground supervision duty for teachers at Jewett Elementary school has been announced by Bill Brewster, principal.

The new schedule was drawn up following an evaluation of teacher duty by the staff of Jewett school. The new schedule reduces the time a teacher spends in playground supervision from more than 100 minutes daily to 45 minutes.

There is now only one duty assignment for each teacher daily, and duties are changed weekly. Teachers have found, Brewster said, that the new schedule allows them more time for individual student attention and still provides sufficient playground supervision.

Service Firms Show Rise in Receipts

Receipts of selected service establishments in Medford totaled $6,655,000, according to the preliminary census of business.

Medford showed an increase of $1,269,000 or 23.6 per cent over 1954 levels, according to Harold K. Cherry of the Portland field office of the department of commerce.

Total receipts of these establishments in Oregon were $266 million, a 22 per cent rise over the 1954 totals.

Grants Pass receipts were $2,735,000 or a 5.1 per cent increase, and Klamath Falls receipts were $5,560,000, a 25.2 per cent increase over 1954 levels.

Roseburg was the only large Oregon city to show a decrease, with $3,045,000, a decrease of 12.6 per cent.

36 Landowners Seek Help for Woodlands

Thirty-six landowners requesting woodland assistance were contacted last month by Jim Fisher, farm forester for the southwest district of the state department of forestry.

Planting done by these landowners totaled 117 acres. Much of the farm forestry work at this time of year is concerned with tree planting and Christmas tree growing.

Air Reserve Unit Seeking Enlistments
The 9417 Air Reserve squadron in Medford is now enlisting veterans from any branch of the military services, according to Lt. Col. Manville Heisel, commanding officer of this local unit.

New enlistment periods run from two to six years, he said. Further information can be obtained from the Air Force Reserve office at 216 East Main st.

House Trailer Fees Change on Jan. 1

Salem—Oregon house trailer owners will be paying a new schedule of fees starting Jan. 1 when a law adopted by the last legislature becomes effective. The new law establishes a flat registration fee and a license fee based on market value.

A $6 registration fee for all house trailers will replace the former $15-$25 fee. The new license fee will be 2 per cent of 80 per cent of the trailer's original market value. This will be reduced about 10 per cent each year for the first five years after sold, and 5 per cent for the next four years. After nine years there is no reduction.

The department of motor vehicles is charged with collection of both fees. It will distribute collected license fees to the counties of registration. This fee replaces the property tax formerly collected by the counties.

All house trailers with an over-all length of at least 12 feet and six feet high from floor to ceiling are now required to be licensed and registered whether or not they are used on a public road. The fee applies even if trailers are stored. The only exceptions are for trailers held by dealers and for trailers permanently fixed on land by foundation, attached structures or fixed pipe connections.

Decorating Contest Slated in Gold Hill

Gold Hill—The annual Christmas home decorating contest in the Gold Hill area will be sponsored again this year by the local Lions club, according to Gilbert Mack, publicity chairman for the club.

Cash prizes will be awarded the winners. The Gold Hill Lions club has invited all interested persons in this area to participate.
