Tree Rustlers Being Watched by State Patrols

Portland — (UPI) — The Christmas season, which brings out the spirit of goodwill in most people, also brings into action gangs of "tree rustlers" who prey upon Oregon's Christmas tree growers.

American Forest Products Industries said today that tree farmers, the State Forestry department and police agencies are taking special measures this month to prevent poaching that has cost tree growers thousands of dollars in past annual thefts.

Trucks Spot Checked

Law enforcement agencies are spot checking truckloads of Christmas trees on highways to determine whether drivers have a bill of sale as required by state law.

State forestry personnel are patrolling their lands to prevent illegal cutting, according to Vance Morrison, assistant state forester.

"We are especially concentrating on patrolling the Tillamook burn area," Morrison said, "where several million dollars have been spent on reforestation."

Forest Service rangers also are maintaining an alert lookout to prevent improper cutting of trees on federal lands.

Reward Offered

At Medford, members of the Southern Oregon Conservation and Tree Farm association, have posted their lands, offering a $250 reward for apprehension and conviction of commercial tree rustlers.

In the Klamath Falls area, most posters have been put up offering rewards for the rustlers.

Timber growers are using mobile radio to report license numbers of suspect haulers to state police, Morrison added.

State Institution Films Completed

Salem — (UPI) — The first complete motion picture record of Oregon's 11 state institutions was completed Thursday.

Robert Richter, state government program coordinator, announced completion of the "In Our Care" documentary film series.

The project, first of its kind in Oregon, was started two years ago. Richter directed and narrates the series. Cameraman was William Rush, Corvallis.

The films are being telecast over the state's station, KOAC as well as through commercial channels in Oregon and Washington.

Copies of the films are available to clubs and other groups.

Pastor Meted 5 Years Probation

Portland — (UPI) — The Rev. Carl Loston Anderson, assistant pastor of the New Jerusalem Baptist church, was put on probation for five years Thursday when he pleaded guilty to a manslaughter charge in Circuit court here.

Anderson was accused of shooting his daughter's suitor last May.

He said he was distraught over an incident that severely injured his daughter. The girl had plunged from the second floor window of the house and Frank Johnkin, the victim, allegedly was with the girl at the time of the fall.

Johnkin was killed during a talk about the accident.
