

In the Day's News
By FRANK JENKINS

As this is written, there are three tales in the news that in themselves are insignificant in a nation of 179 million people. But in their larger implications they concern all of us.

Let's take a look at them in the order of their importance.

FIRST, there is the case of the cow owned by Francisco Alvarez, 83-year-old resident of the Latin quarter of Tampa, Florida.

Among other things, she MOODED. (Bawled is a more expressive word, but "moored" is the way it appeared in the dispatches.) Her moos were apt to be resonant. Indignant neighbors claimed they rattled the windows in the vicinity—especially when she took a notion to moo at midnight.

So the neighbors lodged a complaint against her as a nuisance. Senor Alvarez brought in three character witnesses, who testified that when the cow moored she moored mildly and with no intent to disturb.

The judge—basing his decision, presumably, on the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number—ordered the cow out of town.

THE second case story (also from Tampa) concerns Bruno, a Boxer dog owned by a prominent grocery dealer named Fernandez. Bruno, it appears, was in the habit of biting the neighbors. The neighbors finally took Owner Fernandez into court.

Again, the judge fell back on the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number. Bruno, doubtless, enjoyed biting the neighbors. It is possible that his owner enjoyed seeing the neighbors bitten.

But there were more neighbors than Brunos. So the judge ruled that the right of the neighbors NOT TO BE BITTEN outweighed Bruno's right to BITE. He ordered Bruno's owner to get rid of Bruno or serve six months in jail.

THIRD in this trio of trivial tales in the case of the lady in Milburn, New Jersey, who was talking on her party line when a doctor broke in to ask her to hang up. He broke in five times, he said, explaining that the reason he was in a hurry was that he wanted the line to call an ambulance to take an elderly heart patient to the hospital.

The lady told him where he could go, and the destination she described to him is a place known for the warmth of its climate. The doctor took the case into court and the judge, after hearing all the testimony, fined the lady $210.

The lady, one assumes, was standing on her rights. She had paid her telephone bill. Was it not her right to talk on her telephone when she wanted to without being annoyed by Johnny-come-latelies who wanted to INTERRUPT her conversation?

It sounds reasonable. But — The judge based his decision in the case on the accepted principle that under our American system the rights of each individual are LIMITED BY THE RIGHTS OF OTHERS.

In conclusion: For months, here in the U.S.A., there has been a steel strike—which is temporarily interrupted by a court order sending the workers back to their jobs for a period of 80 days, at the end of which they can resume the strike if they so vote.

The workers want more pay and work rules that are to their liking. The operators contend that granting the workers' demands would increase their costs to the point where foreign competitors would have an advantage in the markets of the world.

We must all grant that it is the right of the workers to insist on better wages and working conditions to their liking and that it is the right of the operators to resist demands that will put them at a competitive disadvantage.
